Successful Bremen-Kiel Raid Costs U. S. 26 Big Bombers; Third Italian Outpost Yields

Bus Strike Ends; Service To Resume Early Today

Agreement Reached At Conference Here; Weary Passengers Jam Terminal

A 36-hour strike of Greyhound bus drivers ended this morning at 12:30 a. m. as tired passengers still crowded the waiting room of the Greyhound Bus Terminal, Twelfth Street and New York Avenue Northwest, waiting for the resumption of service scheduled at 5 a. m. today.

The strike began at noon Saturday and was followed by the 36-hour conference between L. C. Major, District manager for the line and union officials and representatives of the Department of Labor Conciliation Service.

It resulted in the cancellation of 60 trips to Baltimore, 4 to Gettysburg and 6 to Scranton, Pa. Bus routes to these cities were the only ones affected in the strike which had resulted from the discharge of a bus driver, Major said.

Terms Not Revealed

Terms of the settlement were not revealed.

During the night a weary mother and father anxiously prepared a bottle for their 16-month-old baby—a worried woman traveling to New York to help on a labor-short farm—a boy trying to get to Fort George Meade to report for his job today—a girl waiting hopelessly for a bus from Baltimore and the arrival of her roommate—these were some of the persons in the crowded waiting room.

Driver Was Discharged

The dispute, Major said, resulted from the discharge of a driver when he was discovered, in uniform, on company property drunk again.

Major said that this was not the first time the man had committed the offense.

Members and officials of the Amalgamated Association of Street Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes would not give their version of the dispute to reporters.

By noon Saturday all bus operations between Washington and Baltimore, Gettysburg and Scranton, Pa., had been stalled. Union men say it is not a strike but "a continuous meeting."

Still Confer at Midnight

Company officials, conciliators and Union representatives went into the conference at 8 p. m. Saturday and continued until 2:45 a. m. yesterday, when they recessed until 8:30 p. m. The conference was resumed and then lasted until 12:30 a. m. today.

At the conference were Major Clark Dorsey, District president of the union, Joseph P. Conlin and L. F. Rye of the Department of Labor Conciliation Office.

Mrs. Hattie Gaines of Sanford, Fla., was on her way to Savannah, N. Y., where she intends to do farm work. Her baggage was checked through at Sanford and she did not know where it was waiting. Told that a bus may leave at any time she had remained in the waiting room since 3 p. m. Saturday, sleeping as best she could.

Sam Williams, Washington, Va., youth, was trying vainly to get to Fort Meade in time to take over his duties at the Post Exchange by the time the exchange opens today.

Waits For Roommate

Flora Staton of Takoma Park, Md., waited vainly for a roommate strike-bound in Baltimore.

Major estimated that 18,000 would-be passengers had been denied transportation due to the strike. The stoppage affected 440

Waiting for a Bus

WITH 2 CENTS AND A BOTTLE OF MILK—James Duman and his wife were among the hundreds stranded last night at the Greyhound Bus Terminal, Twelfth and New York Avenue Northwest, when a strike tied up buses. They came from Panama with their 16-month-old daughter and were bound for Johnstown, Pa., where the father hopes to land a job in a steel mill. Except for a bus ticket, Duman had only 2 cents left after buying baby a bottle of milk. They were finally rerouted over other lines

2 D. C. Youths Drown as Heat Reaches 95

Storm Brings Relief; Cooler Weather Predicted for Today

Two Washington youths were drowned late yesterday afternoon during the storm which broke a record heat of 95 degrees and brought the thermometer down to 74 within several minutes.

Arthur P. Greenberg, 23, of 1709 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, was drowned in the Potomac River, police said, when a canoe, which he shared with two companions, capsized. His body was still being sought late last night by Harbor Police.

Herman E. Beatty, Negro, 11, of 926 O Street Northwest, was reported by playmates to have been drowned in a 5-foot-deep creek near Klingle Road and Beach Drive when he dived after his shoes which had fallen into the water. Pronounced dead by Dr. S. P. Marshall, the boy was identified by his father, Robert Beatty, police reported.

Drownings Total 13

Yesterday's accidents brought the number of drownings in the District in 1943 to 13.

Lucas A. Alden, consultant on the War Production Board, last night was admitted to Emergency Hospital with a broken leg. He was brought by private ambulance from Calverton Airport, Va., where the plane he boarded apparently was smashed on the ground during the storm. Alden lives at 1731 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest police reported.

The Weather Bureau forecast cooler weather for today while it reported a high of 95 degrees at 4:40 yesterday afternoon, a temperature equalled this year only by that of June 4. Yesterday's low was 71 degrees at 5:40 a. m. and the temperature immediately before the storm was 94.

Robert Silverman, of 1709 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, and Saul Pressman of 833 Allison Street Northwest, were in the canoe with Greenberg. They managed to swim about 100 feet toward shore and were picked up in a boat rowed by Ernest Jenkins, 4522 Canal Road. Greenberg was

C.I.O. May Quit WLB Over Antistrike Bill

Would Thus Avoid Participating in 'Police' Measures

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

The C. I. O. may refuse to participate in War Labor Board decisions pending clarification of its relationship to the War Labor Board under the Connally-Smith antistrike bill, it was learned yesterday.

Both C. I. O. President Philip Murray and A. F. of L. President William Green are expected to ask the President to veto the measure which passed the Senate by a 55-to-22 vote Saturday, completing Congressional action on it. The President is slated to receive the bill today after it is signed by House Speaker Rayburn and Vice President Wallace.

The measure forbids strikes in Government-operated war plants and provides criminal penalties for aiding strikes, lockouts, or slowdowns in such plants.

Van A. Bittner and John Brophy, C. I. O. members of the War Labor Board, were said to fear that they will be put in an anomalous position by presidential approval of the measure—policemen to enforce what they consider an anti-labor law.

The question of labor relationship to the War Labor Board under the measure is being studied by the legal staffs of both the C. I. O. and the federation. It is expected that Murray and Green will confer on the question before making their positions public. Meanwhile, the C. I. O. representatives were said to be uncertain about the propriety of acting in pending cases.

The C. I. O. officials are said to fear that the war Labor Board will become a part of hte enforcement machinery of the measure every time it faces potential defiance from a labor union. In the past, such cases have been referred to the President who has frequently ordered Government seizure and operation of the property involved.

Under the antistrike measure, this action automatically would

U. S. Air Power Shifts Blows To Sicily After Linosa Falls

By Daniel De Luce
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 13.—Italy lost her third island outpost in the central Mediterranean in three days when a British destroyer accepted the bloodless surrender of Linosa today, and fleets of American bombers and fighters began switching their knockout punch to Sicily.

Without a shell being fired or a bomb dropped, the panicky 140-man garrison of Italian soldiers and sailors raised white flags on the little speck of land 105 miles south of Sicily and from the bridge of his speedy gray warship, the destroyer Nubian, Commander J. R. J. Tyrwhitt accepted the enemy capitulation.

The garrison, grateful for having been spared the ordeal of bombs and shells such as produced the surrender of Pantelleria on Friday and the lightning fall of Lampedusa about 30 hours later, was immediately taken off and transported to Allied prison camps.

Believed Without Airfields

The tiny island, only about 2 miles across in either direction, had no harbors capable of sheltering anything larger than a motor torpedo boat and was believed to be without airfields or important military installations. Its normal population of about 500 is mostly engaged in raising cattle.

American Flying Fortresses, Marauders, Lightnings and Warhawks began their assault on Sicily yesterday.

As in the opening attacks on Pantelleria, they turned their attention first to the enemy's air fields, and Allied headquarters said "large numbers" of the nearly 150 planes on the ground at Milo, Castelvetrano and Bocca di Falco were riddled by fragmentation bombs.

Comiso, Marzamimi Raided

Malta's fighter-bombers also raided Marzamimi, in southeastern Sicily, where they attacked a small vessel with cannon fire, and Comiso, Sicily, where they hit road transportation.

Not a single Allied aircraft was lost yesterday.

Details of the surrender of Lampedusa, 80 miles south of Pantelleria, were given in these words by the Allied communique:

"Immediately after the surrender of Pantelleria, strong forces of medium and fighter bombers of the Northwest African Air Forces carried out attacks on Lampedusa. Four cruisers and six destroyers, including a Greek destroyer, bombarded the island twice during the night of June 11-12 and at frequent intervals throughout yesterday. Enemy batteries were in action, but

Calumny, Pope Calls Tale He Supports War

Nazi 'Propaganda' Denounced by Pius; Appeals to Workers

By the Associated Press

Pope Pius XII appealed yesterday for discipline and faith among the world's workmen, and at the same time denounced "propaganda of antireligious inspiration that the Pope supports the war and supplies money for its continuance, that the Pope does nothing for peace."

"Never perhaps was there launched a calumny more monstrous or absurd than this," the Pope asserted, saying no one else so insistently opposed the outbreak, advance and spread of the war, or pleaded more for peace.

"When the truth of the facts and our work will have been revealed," he said, "they will be confounded who maliciously try to throw on the papacy the responsibility for all the blood that has flowed in the battles on land, in the air and in the sea, and in the ruins of cities."

(On May 25 the Nazi-controlled Paris radio broadcast a talk in which a Dr. Friedrich accused the Catholic Church of "a crushing responsibility in unleashing the present war." Friedrich charged the Vatican with hostility to Adolf Hit-

U. S. Pilots Fell 25 Jap Planes, Lose 6 Craft

Fresh devastation was dealt the Japanese air forces Saturday, when United States fighter pilots shot down at least 25 of a flight of "about 40 or 50" enemy Zeros over the Russell Islands, the Navy reported yesterday.

Eight more of the Japs were "probably shot down," Communique 409 reported.

United States losses were six planes but the pilots of four of them were rescued.

In the same communique it was revealed that two more Mitsubishi bombers had been destroyed by American fighters.

Army Liberator bombers accounted for the latest Mitsubishi to crash into the sea in flames. Two Liberators encountered a pair of the enemy bombers about 20 miles west of Buka Island in the Solomons. They struck swiftly, shooting down one enemy plane.

The other Mitsubishi was downed by fighters in an engagement over the north end of Malaita Island, also in the Solomons. Previously Navy communiques had asserted that four bombers had been destroyed in that fight, but later reports raised the total to five.

The Navy gave no explanation of the fact that only Japanese fighter planes were in the air battle over the Russell Islands. However, it appeared that the enemy may be

Reds Report 3319 German Planes Bagged

Six-Week Losses Of Enemy Heavy in Russian Air Drive

By the Associated Press

London, Monday, June 14 — Russian bombers pounded at key points in the bulging Orel sector of the German line over the week-end, attacking big enemy train concentrations and ammunition dumps, a special communique said today, while the regular midnight bulletin reported 498 German planes destroyed last week for a total of 3319 plane in six weeks.

The bombers struck Saturday night at the rail junctions of Gomel, 200 miles southwest of Orel, and Bryansk, 75 miles west of the strong-point city, and at the station of Karachev, midway between Orel and Bryansk. More than 100 fires were started and heavy explosions followed. Two Russian planes failed to return.

The midnight communique said 153 Russian planes were lost last week to 498 German. This brought the German planes so far destroyed in June to 1250.

Observers interpreted the heavy raids as evidence that the Soviets were joining the Roosevelt-Churchill plan to try knocking out Germany and Italy by air.

The Red air force was rated at having reached a new height of power, delivering harder attacks than ever before.

A German transport and two patrol boats were sunk in the Barents Sea by Russian planes, while in the Black Sea an enemy transport was sunk, the midnight communique said.

On the western front Russian troops killed about 200 Germans and silenced four enemy artillery and mortar batteries.

Goebbels' Home Hit in R.A.F. Raid

Stockholm, June 13 (INS).—The suburban villa of Dr. Joseph Goebbels, German minister of propaganda, has been seriously damaged by Royal Air Force bombs, Swedish newspapers reported today. Goebbels lives at Dahlem.

24 R.A.F. Planes Toll of Sweeps Over Ruhr; Other Targets Blasted

By Lewis Hawkins,
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 13.—Two large formations of American heavy bombers smashed down many German fighters and blasted the Nazi U-boat bases at Bremen and Kiel today in the greatest air battle ever waged by the Eighth United States Air Forces.

The two sky fleets flew unescorted to the heavily defended north German bases for the double-barreled daylight attack. The cost was 26 four-engined bombers, the most severe loss ever suffered by the Eighth Air Force in a single day's operations.

"The attack occasioned the greatest air battle in which Eighth Air Force heavy bombers have yet participated and against the largest concentration of enemy fighters," said the United States communique.

Bremen and Kiel, which account for a considerable percentage of the Nazi war machine's U-boat production and servicing, "were bombed effectively and many enemy fighters were destroyed," the bulletin said.

Biggest Previous Loss

The largest loss ever suffered before by American heavy bombers in a single raid was the 16 downed during the last previous attack on Bremen, April 17.

While deploring the heavy loss of men and equipment in the run to Kiel, Brig. Gen. Frederick L. Anderson, commander of a Flying Fortress wing, said the "price was not too high for the results achieved."

"Not only did we hit important submarine installations at Kiel, but we also drew off practically all enemy aircraft in the area so that the other formation was able to do a splendid job at Bremen with little opposition."

Kiel is about 100 miles north of Bremen, and to get to it the huge squadrons had to fly a round trip of approximately 1000 miles.

Other Targets Blasted

The two-way assault increased the momentum of the newest aerial offensive against Hitler's war plants, following by only a few hours a heavy night attack by R. A. F. heavyweights on Bochum and other key points in Germany's

Gov. O'Conor's Wife Admits Driving Trip

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 13.—The State Office of Price Administration announced today that information concerning an automobile trip to Charleston, S. C., taken by the wife of Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor, would be turned over to a Baltimore Ration Board for its action.

Mrs. O'Conor said yesterday that she took the trip to South Carolina late in March on the advice of her physician. She added that the journey was made in a State-owned automobile.

Cornelius P. Mundy, chief enforcement attorney of the State OPA, in announcing the matter would be turned over to the ration board, said:

"Mrs. O'Conor telephoned Saturday afternoon voluntarily to say that she desired to give all information concerning the facts requested.

"The matter will be determined by the proper tribunal. It will be submitted to the board where the rations were issued.

"Judge Emory H. Niles (chairman of the board) will select a panel for the hearing. Judge Niles will act as chairman of the panel.

"Because this is a pending matter, I can make no further statement. From this point on the matter rests with the board."

Park Policemen Report 200 Pleasure-Driving Offenses

More than 200 violations of the pleasure driving ban were reported late last night by four U. S. Park Policemen with reports from 15 more enforcement officers still outstanding. The alleged violators were said to have been picked up mainly around swimming pools and near the Watergate where the opening of this season's Sunset Symphony concerts took place.

Thirty-five automobiles, most of them bearing A ration stickers on their windshields, were parked last night in front of Friendship, 3308 R Street Northwest, stately mansion of Mrs. Evalyn Walsh McLean, who entertained at one of her Sunday night parties.

Just before the guests left at midnight there were approximately 17 automobiles parked on R Street between Thirty-fourth Street and Wisconsin Avenue. Residents in the community, who had gathered across the street to look up at the brilliantly lit ballroom and listen to the lively orchestra music, estimated that six of the cars belonged to those who lived in the neighborhood.

The guests, many of them driving cars with diplomat licenses, also left in automobiles parked behind the mansion on Thirty-fourth Street and in the adjoining block on R Street.

However, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, wife of the newspaper columnist, descended from the house alone. Although she was wearing a full-skirted print evening dress, she smiled and explained that she had come and was returning home by streetcar and bus. Navy Commandant Operates 'Hog Heaven' at Seabee Camp

By Drew Pearson

NEAR HISTORIC Williamsburg, site of William and Mary College, and recently rebuilt by John D. Rockefeller, is Camp Peary, training ground for the Navy's famous Seabees and named for the admiral who discovered the North Pole. Camp Peary has weathered various stormy controversies, but most interesting is the story of the hogs of the commanding officer, Capt. J. G. Ware. Captain Ware is raising hogs on United States property.

Originally, his farm was located near the center of things, but enlisted men complained that "the pigs are on high dry ground while we're in the mud."

So today, if you visit Camp Peary, you will find Captain Ware's hog farm on the edge of the camp, but still within the limits of the Government reservation. You will also find bulldozer B-16 parked on the farm for clearing space for feed troughs, access roads, etc.; also Navy dump truck No. 18924, driven on a recent afternoon by Sailor L. Bartels and carrying 1400 pounds of slop from the camp in one morning alone.

The garbage in itself is not to be sneezed at as hog feed—full of peas, beans and a lot of food which looked as if it had been dumped out of Navy kitchens, some of it untouched. According to Bartels, trucks make three trips a day to the hog farm. Captain Ware says that he buys the garbage from the contractor who purchases all the garbage from the camp.

In charge of the Navy commandant's venture in livestock is First Class Petty Officer O. L. Hooberry, who devotes his whole time to hog raising. He is paid $151.50 a month by the United States taxpayer, lives at the taxpayer's expense, wears Government clothes—and does nothing but look after the hogs.

Questioned about his "Navy" duties recently, Chief Petty Officer Hooberry waxed eloquent. "I can get anything I want out here. I can eat officers' chow. Look—I don't even have to wear socks."

"How many hogs on the place?"

"Well, I don't know. I ain't supposed to talk about that."

"How much property do you have out here?"

"Well, one farm's about 70 acres and the other about 300. Plenty of room."

"Been getting pretty good prices?"

"Hell, yes. Why just last week I sold 6000 pounds for $15 a

'Vision and Daring'

Roberts Foresees World Union If Americans Will Demand It

If they have the vision and daring of our forefathers, Americans will demand a union of all peoples willing and able to cooperate in an international federation after the war, Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts said last night on the American Forum of the Air program.

The program was broadcast over the Mutual Broadcasting Co. network.

Others speaking were Senator Guy M. Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa; Clarence K. Streit, author of "Union Now," and president of the Federal Union, Inc., and Representative Bartel J. Jonkman (Republican) of Michigan.

The question was, "Can We Organize Peace on Federal Union Lines?" Justice Roberts and Streit took the affirmative and Gillette and Jonkman the negative.

"I construe 'we' to mean the people of the United States," Justice Roberts said. "So understanding the inquiry I do not hesitate to answer in the affirmative. The pinch of the matter is not our ability but our will.

"What the people of the United States want after the defeat of the dictators they can have. If they are satisfied to have the nations of the world revert to the dismal game of international intrigue, of trading at arms length, of bluffing each other, all to gain temporary selfish advantage, that is what the postwar era will witness.

"If despite the demonstrated ineffectiveness of treaties and leagues, they are content to have them tried again, more wars are foredoomed.

"If, on the contrary, the body of our people have the vision and the daring the founding fathers exhibited in 1787, they will demand a union of all peoples willing and able to cooperate in an interna-

26 American Planes Lost In Great Raid

industrial Ruhr Valley. The night raid cost the R. A. F. 24 bombers, but the Germans conceded that it caused heavy damage.

New blows also were rained on other enemy targets throughout France and the Low Countries by daylight today. American and British fighters and British medium bombers shuttled over the Channel in a seemingly endless stream to hammer enemy installations in these operations which went on virtually all day.

The United States communique telling of today's dual bombing assault said "very strong enemy fighter opposition" was "concentrated largely against the formation attacking Kiel."

Pilots participating in the Bremen attack said enemy ground fire was "so thick you could almost walk on it," but the fighter opposition there was light.

At Bremen the Germans again attempted to supplement their ground defenses with smudge-pot smoke screens, but as usual they merely served to help guide the attackers to their mark.

Nazis Boost Defenses

Reports of R. A. F. crewmen on the night raid on Bochum indicated that the Nazis have thrown still more guns, searchlights and planes into the Ruhr in a desperate effort to check the devastating Allied air offensive before it completes Prime Minister Churchill's experiment of bombing Germany out of the war.

The Bochum raid was not on the record scale of the Duesseldorf-Muenster attack by the R. A. F. the previous night, but it still was heavy enough to pour in 4000-pound bombs at the rate of five per minute at the peak of the assault, which also delivered tens of thousands of incendiaries and smaller bombs.

Reconnaissance flights over the Duesseldorf-Muenster area late yesterday showed fires still burning from the Friday night raid.

P-47 Thunderbolts of the Eighth U. S. Air Force destroyed three enemy planes during a forenoon sweep over the European coast today and other American fighters downed two more during the afternoon. Two Eighth Air Force fighters were lost.

An air ministry communique said the R. A. F. carried out "large-scale offensive operations" over northern France and the Low Countries today. Mitchells bombed targets at Flushing in Holland and Bostons attacked objectives at Lille in France in the forenoon while typhoon bombers battered the airfield at Abbeville in France this afternoon.

Many squadrons of fighters supported these operations and two of them were lost along with two of the bombers. Spitfires downed one enemy fighter and a four-engined Focke-Wulf reconnaissance plane was bagged by two R. A. F. Mosquitoes over the Bay of Biscay.

(The German radio, telling of the attack on Bremen and Kiel declared that at least 15 American "superbombers" were shot down and that they were "so effectively intercepted that most machines were forced to jettison their bombs.")

Bremen Raided 104 Times

Bremen, with its concentration of submarine and airplane factories, has been one of the principal targets of the Allied air offensive, having been raided 104 times since the war began.

Kiel, great shipbuilding center, had been bombed on 73 previous occasions, twice by American bombers in daylight precision attacks. It was believed that today's bombardments by Maj. Gen. C. Eaker's forces were carried out on the same scale as those of two days ago, when more than 200 heavyweights plastered Wilhelmshaven and Cuxhaven.

Bochum, object of last night's pounding by the British, is a center of Germany's coal, iron and steel industry, 11 miles west of battered Dortmund. It has a population of more than 300,000, with tens of thousands employed in its big chemical factories and branches of the Krupps armament works.

This was the third heavy raid on Bochum this year. In the last previous R. A. F. attack on May 13 more than 1000 tons of bombs were rained on the town.

The German air force retaliated against England during the night, raiding a southwest coast town in moonlight and dropping a few bombs on London's outskirts, the air ministry announced. At least four raiders were reported destroyed.

(The German radio identified Plymouth as the city attacked by a "heavy" formation of Nazi bombers. It said five fires were left burning in the city.

(Of the R. A. F. attack on Bochum the German communique said "considerable destructions were caused to private houses and public buildings.")

Two persons were killed and others seriously injured by bombs which fell in a thickly built-up London suburb. Two Nazi fliers who bailed out of a plane shot down during the raid were captured almost immediately by home guardsmen. The bodies of three others were found in the wreckage of another raider.

massing fighters in huge groups and sending them out with instructions to seek battle with American bombing planes which have been regularly pounding Japanese bases throughout the area. It also was possible that the enemy fighters may have planned strafing of American positions in the Solomons.

Navy, Marine and Army fliers joined in the big engagement, presumably flying out to the attack from Henderson Airfield on Guadalcanal, 60 miles southwest of the Russells. They battled "40 or 50" Japanese fighter planes, the Navy reported, and definitely shot down 25. In addition, the communique reported, "eight more probably were shot down."

Other fliers, meanwhile, were hitting again from Flying Fortresses and Avenger torpedo bombers at Japanese positions on Bougainville Island. One flight during the night of June 10, Solomons time, struck the Buin area, starting fires in the Japanese buildings there where the enemy has a sea and land base.

Aerial action continued, too, in the Aleutian Islands, where regular raids have been made on Kiska in an apparent softening up of that enemy base, possibly as a prelude to invasion. Army Liberator heavy bombers, Mitchell medium bombers, and Lightning and Warkhawk fighters struck five times there.

When they ended their series of Friday morning attacks bomb pits pockmarked the runway at the Japanese airfield, buildings and tents had been shattered in the main camp area and barges in Kiska Harbor had been bombed and strafed.

"Following a heavy air attack, shortly after 1730 hours (5:30 p. m.) white flags were seen flying on the island and at about 7 o'clock the naval commander sent an officer ashore to negotiate the surrender."

The number of prisoners captured on Lampedusa had not yet been announced, but the communique said 2800 of the more than 10,000 captured at Pantelleria had been received on the African mainland.

Enemy Tries Torpedoing

It disclosed that enemy naval craft put in their first appearance Friday night, attacking with torpedoes while light British coastal forces were patrolling the Sicilian Straits to cover the evacuation operation.

The enemy forces fled at high speed, however, when the British patrols moved in.

An Italian communique declared German planes sank a transport of 8000 tons and 14 landing craft, and damaged three cruisers, six merchant ships and 14 "minor warships" in attacks in the Sicilian channel.

This appeared to be a variation of a German claim yesterday to the sinking of an 8000-ton transport and 13 landing boats and the damaging of three cruisers, eight other warships and six transports. Both were without confirmation from Allied sources.

The Italians also declared that torpedo planes had raided Allied convoys off the coast of Cirenaica and Phillipeville, Algeria, hitting five ships, but this claim also was unconfirmed.

The Italians admitted losses in Allied raids on Reggio Calabria in Italy, and Catania and Palermo in Sicily, listing 12 killed and 28 injured.

Communist Deputies Attack French Setup

By the Associated Press

Algiers, June 13.—Twenty-six French Communist deputies demanded publicly today a quick solution of the dispute between Gen. Charles de Gaulle and Gen. Henri Giraud, charging that the French armed forces still are led by "generals and admirals who believed in the fall of the Anglo-Americans."

Their statement also called upon the now deadlocked French executive body to "transform immediately its solemn promises into facts," and declared that their group had been ignored by the French Committee for National Liberation.

The deputies presumably are not identified with either of the De Gaulle or Giraud cliques, but it's generally considered that De Gaulle enjoys their full support, and their demands dovetail with that Fighting French general's call for a sweeping purge of officers in the army.

The manifesto thus tended to support De Gaulle's position at a time when he and Giraud are at odds over the division of authority for the armed forces and the method of eliminating pro-Vichy officers.

The Communist statement said that the "French people have had enough of personal power—they want neither a Petain nor a Bonaparte . . . The people of metropolitan France have not endured famine and deportation, nor sacrificed their lives in order to see reappear at the head of the army and navy those generals and admirals who fired on Allied troops and served Petain, the traitor."

"In France there is heroic courage among the masses," the manifesto added. "In Algeria there is capitulation to avidity and the rivalry of sordid egotisms."

As French Deputies who have been liberated from prison, the 26 Communists asserted: "We have the right to raise our voice and express the sentiments of the people. We have this right more than ever since we were not consulted on the formation, composition or program of the French committee of liberation.

"We declare that for the good name of France in the world, for her grandeur and for her rejuvenation it is indispensable to transform immediately into facts the solemn promises contained in the first declaration of the committee," the statement concluded.

De Gaulist political quarters claimed the Fighting French leader nearly had swung the committee to an agreement with his proposal that he become minister of national defense while General Giraud retained his title of commander in chief of the army. Gen. Alphonse Juin was mentioned as a likely choice for chief of staff of the army.

De Gaulle purposely absented himself from committee meetings last week and threatened to resign if the deadlock continued.

Pope Denounces Nazi Story He Supports War; Calls for Faith Among Workers

ler since 1933 and with encouraging German Catholics in an open fight against the Nazis. "Thus the war was declared," he said. "A sly warfare on the part of Rome and an unshakable firmness of purpose on the part of Germany."

(A vatican broadcast two days later denounced the Paris talk as "propaganda" and added "it was not the Vatican which has declared this war and it is not the Catholic Church in Germany which has brought this her fate, upon herself.")

The Pope spoke to some 20,000 Italian workers, one of the largest audiences in Vatican history. They went to the Vatican on a pilgrimage as a homage of labor, in one of the concluding manifestations of the Pope's jubilee year. The address was delivered in Belvedere courtyard.

Pope Pius asked that workers not "aggravate the burden of extraordinary difficulties under which the peoples are groaning by representing their claims in this hour of universal and imperious needs in a noisy manner and through inconsiderate action.

"Working men and women conscious of their great responsibility for the common good continue their work and persevere in it with discipline and calm, thus contributing invaluable support to the tranquillity and support of all in the social family."

Turning to the war, Pope Pius said:

"The sums of money which the charity of the faithful puts at our disposal are not set apart for nor do they go to sustain the war but to dry the tears of the widows and orphans, to console families anxious and sorrowing for their dear ones far away or missing, to succor the suffering of the poor and needy.

Assails False Stories

"We are conscious of the falsity of what the enemies of God are insidiously circulating in order to disturb the workers and the people, and from the hardships of the life they endure draw an argument against faith and religion which indeed is the sole comfort and hope which upholds man upon earth in the hour of sorrow and misfortune.

"The church does not fear the light of truth. When the circumstances of the times and human passions will permit or call for the publication of documents not yet published concerning the constant activity pursued during this terrible war in favor of peace by the Holy See, which feared neither rebuffs nor opposition, there will appear in more than midday light the stupidity of such accusations."

The official English translation of the address, titled "The Church and Labor," was radioed to the United States from Vatican City.

In his section dealing with labor, Pope Pius again proclaimed "as fundamental prerequisites of social concord" adequate salaries to care for workers and their families, and provide worthy dwellings, education and old age security.

"These conditions of social security should be realized," he said, "If we want society not to be shaken at every season by turbulent ferments and dangerous uprisings but to become tranquil and go forward in harmony, peace and love."

He warned against "false prophets of social prosperity" who disagree with mutual agreements between capital and labor and who "call evil good and good evil."

"Such false phophets would have us believe that salvation must come from a revolution which shall overturn social order and assume a national character," he said. "No, your salvation, beloved sons and daughters, does not lie in revolution.

"Woe to him who forgets that a true national society incorporates social justice and demands a just and fitting sharing by all in the goods of the country.

"Salvation and justice are not to be found in revolution but in an evolution through concord.

"We need, above all, a great righteousness of will and perfect loyalty of purpose and action in the course and regulation of public life as well on the part of the citizens as on the governing authorities. We need a spirit of true concord and brotherhood animating all, superiors and subjects, employers and workers, great and small; in a word, in all classes of the people."

Earthquakes Off Coast of Japan Are Indicated

Boston, June 13 (AP).—Possibility that Japan may have suffered damage from earthquakes which occurred early today was seen by L. Don Leet, Harvard University seismologist, who said two shocks were recorded at the university station. Leet said the shocks occurred off the coast of Japan in a section where "some satisfactorily large tidal waves" had occurred in the past.

When a newsman expressed hope the quake was a "lulu," Leet said it could hardly be classed in that category but that it might well have done damage.

How Allies Took Over Lampedusa

By Paul Kern Lee
Associated Press Staff Writer

Lampedusa, June 12 (Delayed).—A handful of men is now taking over this island from Italian military, naval and marine personnel numbering from 4000 to 5000 who surrendered a half hour ago. The first forces ashore numbered 120.

The Italians are now filing out from their shoreside pillboxes and guns.

It took only two minutes—as quickly as the terms could be understood—for the Italian garrison to agree to unconditional surrender.

Lieut. Hugh A. Corbett of the Royal Navy and I leaped ashore from the destroyer Lookout's launch and after a rapid parley the lieutenant signaled to the sea. He then went out and escorted in a company of the famous Coldstream Guards in landing craft that had hovered offshore all day.

Naval forces had inflicted a night shelling between aerial bombings. Twice during the night and again at dawn the ships hurled explosives ashore.

Lampedusa's shore guns, in contrast with those of Pantelleria, replied spiritedly and with dangerous accuracy. Burning oil fires ashore, star shells from ships, and the splash of Italian projectiles into the sea madé a theatrical spectacle with booming guns and screaming shells as an overture.

The aerial attack continued all day today and in the evening the warships opened up a fourth time. The last bombers reported what appeared to be a white cross at the Lampedusa airfield and said it was believed there were white flags but could not be certain.

The naval squadron's flagship came alongside the destroyer where I was passenger and megaphoned instructions to our ship to send a boat into the harbor under a white flag. Our boat went in with a sheet from the bed of the captain hoisted at the masthead of our destroyer. Another sheet, doubled, was put on a pole for the use of the boat.

The destroyer then sped direct to the harbor mouth and lowered the launch.

The boat was manned by ten happy men. A British army movie photographer and I went as passengers.

A white flag fluttered from a crude staff on the point beside the breakwater.

Lieut. Corbett, natty in dress blues with a stiff, white collar, hopped nimbly ashore and smartly returned the salute given by a gray-bearded, uniformed patriarch. He stood on a landing platform surrounded by a little knot of nondescript Italian soldiers, sailors and marines.

"Do you want to surrender?" the lieutenant asked.

"Si, si, si," replied the Italian vehemently. "We take you to governor 15 minutes distance."

"You jolly well will not," said the lieutenant. "He's the one who wants to surrender so let him come here or I am prepared to accept an unconditional surrender from you. If you do not accept, the attack will be resumed."

The Italian shrugged and plucked his long curly beard like an Old Testament prophet and rejoined, "Very well, I no choice—governor's English poor anyhow."

The lieutenant signalled the destroyer and went out to bring the landing craft inside. The Italian gestured with his hand and the troops, grimy, weary men in dirty green uniforms began clambering from their battered but still effective shore fortifications, dragging the guns they had trained on us during the parley. Through the rubbled ruins of the town they marched to assemble on the open square before a 20-foot cross in memorial to World War I.

'Conqueror' of Lampedusa Bewildered by It All

By Relman Morin
Associated Press Staff Writer

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 13. — That fellow named Cohen who "captured" Lampedusa Island from the Italians yesterday and has papers to prove it is Sergt. Sidney Cohen, 22-year-old R. A. F. pilot, who still was a little bewildered by it all today.

Already named "King of Lampedusa" by his mates, Cohen told how the Italian garrison surrendered to him yesterday, hours before the formal capitulation to British landing forces.

With two mates, Sergt. Peter Cates, a Scotsman, and Sergt. Leslie Wright, he was flying a Swordfish plane on a sea rescue mission when the compass "had a fit of Gremlins."

His gasoline was running low, and Cohen began looking for land and spotted Lampedusa.

He didn't know for sure that it was Lampedusa until he had sat his plane down on the torn airfield and began looking over the situation.

"Burnt-out aircraft were everywhere. There were big holes in the field, and in a moment I knew I was in a bit of a fix," Cohen said.

"Because just then we saw some people waving white sheets, and two Italian officers approaching.

"The leader of the deputation wore a Tyrolean hat with long plumed feathers, a leather jacket, khaki shorts and high boots.

"He burst into Italian, and we discovered he wanted to surrender the island.

"I told him I would have to see the 'No. 1' man, and he took us to a high-ranking naval officer.

"Other officers and civilians entered the room and I was just about to receive the official surrender when 'swish' . . .

"Everybody suddenly ran out of that room and left me alone.

"In a few moments I had a 'worm's eye view' of what was happening.

"About 12 Lightnings came over and hit the harbor. We fell flat.

"As soon as that was over and I and my mates went out to our plane and began cranking her. Just then four fighter bombers zoomed over at zero feet and we dropped in our tracks again.

"But they saw the markings on our wing and swerved away.

"The next chapter was pattern bombing by the big boys. After that was over our Tyrolean friend reappeared and told us to get away at once.

"We thought it a good idea, too, and the 'Eyeties' gave me a piece of paper signed by the commandant, guaranteeing the surrender and asking that we stop the bombardment.

"Those chaps were anxious that we deliver it to the proper authorities, and we promised that.

"Then we began cranking that Swordfish again, twisting the crank so hard we almost tore it off."

Cohen and his mates got their plane into the air and decided to try to reach Tunisia instead of returning to Malta. Their gas proved sufficient and they landed at an American base whence "the King of Lampedusa" triumphantly produced his now celebrated Italian certificate of surrender.

Britain Forms Special Air Unit For Invasion

London, Monday, June 14 — Looking to the invasion of Europe, the air ministry announced today the formation of a tactical air force to work with armies striking from Britain.

The new R. A. F. organization will conform closely with Air Marshal Sir Arthur Coningham's tactical air force which proved so successful in Tunisia. It displaces the Army cooperation command and will be under Air Marshal John Henry D'Albiac.

Maj. Gen. Ira C. Eaker has disclosed that the Eighth United States Army Air Force also has a tactical division, but details of its organization and command have not been announced.

The new R.A.F. force will be made up primarily of fighters, fighter-bombers, medium bombers and specialized types of planes which proved their worth in North Africa, although the organization will be flexible enough to take in other units as needed for specific jobs.

One most important feature will be the high mobility of the operations and communications setup, enabling its squadrons to travel with invasion armies.

The tactical air force is being placed within the fighter command to permit maximum flexibility as between current air operations from Britain and the necessary continuous and close training with the Army.

As the result of lessons learned in the March Army exercises in Britain and the experience in North Africa, the cooperation command was reshaped and expanded into a new force. All squadrons needed for special invasion tasks will be passed through it and trained to the necessary standard.

D'Albiac, 49 years old, has the unusual distinction of having served as soldier, sailor, Marine and airman.

Sidelights of the War

Rommel Reported in Charge of Coast Defense

By the Associated Press

London, June 13.—Field Marshal Erwin Rommel has established headquarters at Perpignan, France, and is reorganizing French coastal defenses, the Algiers radio said in a broadcast today.

The broadcast said the former commander of Hitler's defeated Africa Corps had recently inspected the defenses of Corsica, Sardinia and Sicily. Perpignan is on the Gulf of Lion, just north of the Spanish border.

Italian Mutinies Reported

London, June 13 (AP).—A London newspaper published a report today that extensive mutinies had broken out in the Italian navy, but the dispatch was described in Allied naval circles as "pure rubbish." The report said hundreds of officers and men had been massacred in the outbreaks.

One foreign source said there was a possibility that German insistence that the Italians engage the British fleet might cause defiance by the Italian naval staff.

He said the naval staff believed the Italian navy should be retained as a bargaining point in negotiations rather than sacrificed in a desperate attempt to delay an Allied invasion.

Mad at the World

Stockholm, Sweden, June 13 (AP).—A hint of the nerve strain to which Germans are subject these days as a result of bombings and other fortunes of war is contained in dispatches to Sweden today quoting Adolf Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter.

It said constant quarrels among Germans were detrimental to the war effort and appealed for better public behavior.

Japanese Report Filipino Die-Hards Captured on Luzon

By the Associated Press

Radio Tokyo said yesterday that remnants of a Filipino detachment which had been holding out in Nueva Viscaya province on Luzon Island in the Philippines surrendered Saturday to the Japanese garrison at Baguio, the summer capital.

It declared the province as now "completely pacified."

The prisoners were said in the broadcast, recorded by the Associated Press, to have served in the former Fourteenth Infantry Company of the United States Army.

2 D. C. Teams Of Brothers Serving Flag

Among Washington brother teams serving in the armed forces are Lieut. Charlie H. and Lieut. William H. McGee, and Lieut John C. and Pharmacist's Mate David R. Eckhardt are not to be overlooked.

W. H. McGEE

The Eckhardt boys are sons of Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Eckhardt of 1834 Irving Street Northwest. John is a Naval Air Corps pilot, while David is attached to the Marines. Both were home a year ago last June on furlough, were home together again this week, and, during the interim, met last March on Guadalcanal.

David was with the first contingent of Marines to land on the island last year. John got word through the Navy "grapevine" aboard his carrier as where to was his brother and flew over to see him.

John, 27, was graduated from Annapolis in 1938 after attending Central High School, while David, 25, an Eaton School graduate, joined the Marine Corps Reserve the same year. He was called to active duty three years ago and went overseas last August.

The McGees are sons of Charles H. McGee, sr., field operations employe for WPB, and Mrs. McGee of 1855 Wyoming Avenue Northwest. Both were graduated from Western High School in 1938 and subsequently were employed as clerks in Washington banks— Charlie at Liberty National and Bill at Hamilton National.

Charlie, one of the members of the South Pacific Air Transport of the Marines recently commended for its record in keeping the aerial channel of supplies to Henderson Field open during the battle for Guadalcanal, began flying while a student at Western. After taking a course at Beacon Airport, Alexandria, Va., he received a private pilot's license. He enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1937 and went on active duty in December, 1940.

His brother, Bill, one of Washington's first draftees, attended Officer Candidate School in 1942, and was commissioned in December of that year. He is now stationed on the West Coast, while Charlie is on duty in the South Pacific.

Never Run After A Street Car:

There'll always be another along in a few minutes. As often happens during rush hours, two or more Street Cars or Buses pull into a stop to take on and discharge passengers. As the doors close there is at least one late-comer who dashes up and seeks entrance. A happy ending to the story would have him getting aboard. But pause and consider. During rush hours, as Cars follow each other at fairly close intervals, it's most important that they all move along quickly, stop only once at each corner, so those aboard may get to their destinations as soon as possible. Otherwise we would soon see them inching along, halting two or three times at each stop. Of course, when a light changes to red before a Car or Bus can clear the stop, we're only too glad to take late-comers aboard, if there's room.

1. This picture of a southern Pacific railroad train, its flat cars loaded with army trucks, was one of many taken by LIFE Photographer Peter Stackpole to show LIFE readers the job the railroads are doing in wartime. Readers were taken into troop trains, engineers' cabs, signal towers, repair shops, were shown maintenance crews at work, realized for the first time how America's railroads are handling the toughest job in their history.

2. In this picture, LIFE Photographer Herbert Gehr portrays a typical Ration Board. The faces of its members indicate that they are friendly but firm, and are intent only on giving everyone as square a deal as possible. They are the members of the Ration Board at Bristol, Connecticut, and like all members of the 5500 other local boards in the U.S., they are doing a tough and thankless job for which they get no pay at all. LIFE's story accompanying Gehr's picture showed the 23,000,000 Americans who read LIFE each week that success or failure of wartime rationing depends to a large extent on the actions and decisions of boards like this, and that on the whole, local ration boards all over America are doing a remarkably good job under unusually trying circumstances. The Bristol Board reports that gasoline and fuel oil give them the most headaches. To help ease the gasoline problem, they worked out their own effective plan for car-pooling by defense workers.

Americans see themselves at war

Because Americans today have an ever-growing stake and interest in what is going on here in the U.S., LIFE's home-front photographers are helping them see themselves at war. Eleven of these photographers are pictured on this page together with examples of their work.

Each week some 23 million people find their desire to learn about home-front happenings really satisfied on LIFE's pages. Each week they gain new understanding . . . new appreciation of America at war through the clear, revealing stories in LIFE.

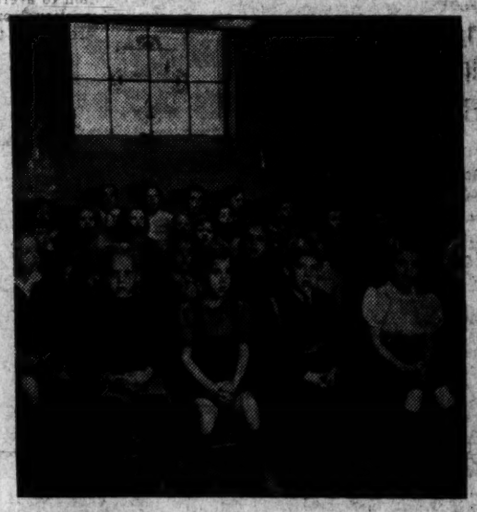
Readers are able to see each subject in a vital, vigorous, and realistic light, and to get the proper perspective of the wartime doings of Americans in every nook and cranny of the Union through the efforts of LIFE's editors, writers, and home-front photographers like those shown here.

LIFE

4. "Boomtown," formerly known as Washington, D.C., is "busting right out of its pants" according to LIFE Photographer John Phillips, who showed LIFE readers many pictures to prove his contention. Sidewalks, restaurants, movies, hotels, buses, and everything else in Boomtown were revealed as hopelessly overcrowded. Phillips' portrayal of wartime life in Washington made many readers thankful they live elsewhere.

5. Speaking of crowds, the railroads of America have more than their share, as LIFE Photographer Ed Clark recently showed in a series of pictures revealing crowded, uncomfortable travel conditions. The article, entitled: "Don't Travel!" urged people to stay home, to avoid travelling unless on war or business bound, showed LIFE readers why railroad trains are overcrowded, and pointed out that at least 35% of today's travel is unnecessary.

6. The poignant spectacle of soldiers saying good-by to families may have become commonplace, but it's always dramatic. LIFE Photographer Alfred Eisenstaedt took LIFE readers into New York's Pennsylvania Station, jammed with service men leaving for whatever awaits them. Here, Eisenstaedt caught a soldier spending last few minutes with his wife and baby, a scene that is the same in Penn. Station or at a tank-town depot.

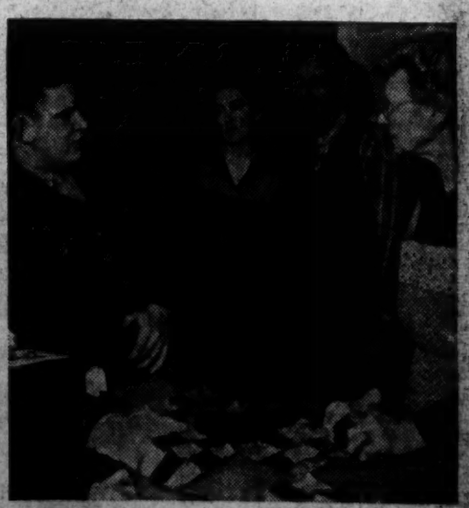


7. Not all is war and work in America today, as this picture by LIFE Photographer Walter Sanders shows. Sanders was one of many LIFE cameramen who scattered all over America to film a typical wartime Sunday. They found Americans in all walks of life setting aside the day of rest to drop back momentarily into normal activities. The Walter Sanders photograph above shows youngsters singing hymns in a church near Plymouth, Mich.

8. All over war-hurried U.S., fires increase in everything from oil refineries to magnesium plants. LIFE Photographer Gijon Mili showed LIFE readers the principles of fire, how they start, how science devises new ways to fight them. Here Professor A. R. Davis of M.I.T. demonstrates the first principle of fire—that anything burns—by blowing corn meal into a flame. Photographer Mili's pictures helped readers to understand why fire control was never more important in America than it is today.

9. LIFE Photographer Marie Hansen recently conducted LIFE readers on an inspection of the WAAC training center at Fort Des Moines, showed in photos like this one how America's first women soldiers train, how they live, and how the jobs they are being taught vary from meat inspection, playing in the band, driving trucks, Post Exchange and office work, to teaching. LIFE readers learned that girls fit easily into army routine, don't mind army discipline, make smart and willing soldiers.

10. All Americans know the vital importance to war of metals, but not many have seen ore mines in operation. Down into the pits and shafts went LIFE readers recently with LIFE Photographer Charles Steinheimer, whose graphic, on-the-spot pictures detailed miners at work, setting off dynamite blasts, using drag buckets, bringing ore cars steaming to the docks. The above night scene shows the ore docks at Duluth, Minn. Docks are built high above ships so the ore will slide easily into holds.



11. The 23,000,000 Americans who read LIFE each week came home from war recently with North Dakota men of the 164th Infantry, fresh from the fighting on Guadalcanal. LIFE Photographer Otto Hagel showed readers what it is like for a soldier to see relatives and friends again, have breakfast in bed, go out with girls, and have to tell grieving parents all they know of a buddy's death in action. Here one soldier tries to comfort a mother by telling her how her son met death bravely.

Four Jesuits From District To Be Ordained

Four Washingtonians are among Jesuits who will be ordained to the priesthood June 20 at Woodstock (Md.) College, by the Most Rev. John M. McNamara, Auxiliary Bishop of Baltimore and Washington Archdioceses.

FR. PITTS

They are the Rev. Samuel R. Pitts, S. J., son of Mrs. Anna C. Pitts and the late Samuel R. Pitts, 1415 Montague Street Northwest; the Rev. John W. McCarron, S. J., son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. McCarron, 53 Girard Street Northeast; the Rev. Frederick A. Brew, S. J. son of Mrs. Arthur L. Brew, 209 Seventh Street Northeast, and the Rev. Joseph E. Kennedy, S. J., son of Mrs. Katherine C. Kennedy and the late Patrick M. Kennedy, 1326 A Street Southeast.

FR. McCARRON

Father Kennedy will say his first solemn mass June 27, 11 a. m., at Holy Comforter Church, Fourteenth and East Capitol Streets; Father Brew, June 27, 9 a. m. St. Joseph's Church, Second and C Streets Northeast; Father McCarron, June 27, 11 a. m., St. Martin's Church, 1901 North Capitol Street, and Father Pitts, June 27, 10:30 a. m., Holy Name Church, 920 Eleventh street Northeast.

FR. KENNEDY

Woodstock College officials announced that war transportation difficulties necessitated splitting up this year's ordinations, so that only the 14 candidates from Washington, Baltimore and vicinity will be ordained June 20, and the other 30 Jesuits, who are from New York and New Jersey, will be ordained June 24, the Feast of Corpus Christi, at the Jesuit Church of St. Ignatius Loyola, New York City. The entire class of 44 will be ordained subdeacons this Friday, and as deacons, the following day, by Bishop McNamara.

New Church Is Formed

CHARTER MEMBERS—The newly formed Lutheran congregation of the Holy Comforter held opening services yesterday in a vacant store space at 3843 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, in the Fairfax Village Shopping Center. Among those first on hand were (left to right) Dean Romig, aviation machinist's mate, second class; Mrs. Don R. Baker, the Rev. John T. Keister, jr., missionary pastor in charge, and Mrs. Keister

Two new congregations — one Protestant and the other Jewish, yesterday opened their doors to accommodate the influx of residents to the area beyond the John Philip Sousa Bridge in Southeast Washington.

The congregation of the Holy Comforter Lutheran Church held first services in temporary quarters at 3842 Pennsylvania Avenue Southeast, the Fairfax Village Shopping Center, under the leadership of the Rev. John T. Keister, missionary pastor of the board of American Missions, United Lutheran Church in America.

The Jewish congregation of B'nai Jacob Temple, 2504 Naylor Road Southeast, last night dedicated its house of worship—first temple of its faith in that section. The Rabbi Morris Blair of Norfolk is spiritual leader.

According to Jacob Levin, chairman of the Temple's board of directors the congregation will emphasize conservative Judaism in its services. Bernard Margolius, Assistant United States Attorney, was last night's speaker.

The Department of Survey and Church Planning of the Washington Federation of Churches recently made a survey of the new residential and business section beyond the Sousa Bridge, among the most-rapidly growing areas in Metropolitan Washington.

Roberts Sees World Union As Possible

tional federation, of limited but supreme power and jurisdiction in international affairs.

"The vital thing is that they shall wish and demand, as the fundamental basis of international cooperation, the pooling of so much of the so-called national sovereignty as is essential to united action on those questions, which, unsettled as between nations, breed war.

"I have no fear," Justice Roberts added, "that other nations will not join our own in such a union. Though it start with but a few, the demonstrated benefits will soon beget adherence of those who at first abstain.

"The one and only indispensable condition to a federation of nations," he concluded, "is that the citizens of this Nation make the matter the first order of the day; that, laying aside all partisan considerations, they unite in a demand that our leaders stand firmly for the only suggested form of international union that holds any promise for world cooperation and world peace."

Senator Gillette said:

"I agree and believe that there must and will be political cooperation with other nations to secure the blessing of peace for the world's future.

"There must and will be commercial cooperation to distribute more equitably the world's supply of raw materials essential to modern living.

"There must and will be financial cooperation to avert panics, to support international exchange, to alleviate distress, and to maintain commerce.

"There must and will be sociological cooperation to better the moral living conditions throughout the world.

"America can, must and will take the lead in these cooperative international efforts. I, for one, am determined to give my every personal support to these ends. But when the attempt is made to specify just how this cooperation is to be implemented and effectuated, there at once arises a host of varying proposals and viewpoints.

"Shall these ends be secured by working within the framework of existing national sovereignties, or through the medium of a supra-state modeled somewhat on the lines of our own Federal Union, but created on a world basis? I am convinced that not only is the first method preferable but also that the second is not feasible, is not practicable, and may not even be possible."

Gonzaga High To Graduate 89 At Commencement

Gonzaga High School's ninety-fourth annual commencement will be held tonight at 8:15 o'clock in Memorial Continental Hall.

More than 70 per cent of the graduating class of 89 already have been sworn into armed forces or are holding necessary papers for induction. One of them, James G. Sfarnas, has reported for active duty with the Army Air Forces and will receive his diploma in absentia.

Martin Company Workers to Pick Bargaining Agent

The National Labor Relations Board announced yesterday that it had ordered an election to be held among workers at the huge Baltimore plants of the Glenn L. Martin Co. to determine their choice of a collective bargaining agent.

The board's order stipulated that the election should be "conducted as early as possible" but not later than July 11, and that most of the company's employes not serving in a supervisory capacity were eligible to vote.

The employes will be given their choice of designating as their agent in collective bargaining the United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers of America (C. I. O.), the International Association of Machinists or the Middle River Aeronautical Employes Association, Inc., an independent group. A space will be provided on the ballot for those who do not wish to be represented by any of the three labor organizations.

'Feed Europe's Children,' Pastor Pleads

The Rev. Frederick J. Bishop, pastor of Ingram Memorial Congregational Church, Tenth and Massachusetts Avenue Northeast, yesterday urged that America practically demonstarte its Christianity by feeding Europe's children.

"The feeding of the starving children of Europe is not an academic red herring to haggle over, is not a political football to kick around as expediency dictates, and is not simply a humanitarian gesture," he said in his Children's Day sermon.

"It is an acid test of all our protestations of good will, the test of our sincerity of what democracy really is, and the one and only chance to show the world we can be trusted to back our words with deeds," he declared.

Mr. Bishop lauded a recent Washington Post editorial on "Feed the Children of Europe" as being "one of the straws in the wind, showing that those who help to shape public policy are awake to the real significance of this hour."

U. S. Union Held Favored in Canada

Detroit June 13 (AP).—Maj. James H. Clark, speaker of the Ontario Legislature, expressed the belief today that 40 to 45 per cent of Canada's citizens would vote for union with the United States if an election were held at this time.

D.C. Churches Mark Whitsunday With Rites

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

And suddenly there came a sound from Heaven as of rushing mighty wind and it filled all the house where they were sitting. (Acts 2:2.)

Whitsunday (or Pentecost), one of Christianity's oldest festivals, yesterday was celebrated locally with numerous special services.

The feast commemorates the descent of the Holy Ghost upon Christ's Apostles on the Jewish feast day of Pentecost, 50 days after the Passover.

A number of churches yesterday marked Whitsunday with traditional confirmations, among them Reformation and Luther Place Memorial Lutheran Churches here, and Christ Lutheran, Bethesda. Some congregations combined the Pentecost celebration with the children's day observance and many children were either confirmed or baptized.

In his Whitsunday sermon at Covenant - First Presbyterian Church, Dr. Albert J. McCartney pictured great evangelistic opportunities for the church in Russia and South America.

Declaring that "the door to the church is being pushed wide open in South America as never before," the minister added:

"The assumptions of exclusive priorities by the Catholic Church have been openly challenged by the recent statement of the Federal Council of Churches, and the State Department has had to admit that challenge. The opportunity for evangelism in Russia is one that will tax all the energy and personnel that the Christian Church outside of Russia has to offer."

Daughter Sees Ship Named for Father

Miss Marcia Crouter, American University student, this weekend had her first glimpse of an escort destroyer recently launched in honor of her father, the late Commander Mark Hanna Crouter, executive officer of the Cruiser San Francisco, who was killed in action at Guadalcanal last fall. Miss Crouter is on the staff of the Eagle, campus publication, and prominent in other student activities.

Returning to her home in Malden, Mass., for her vacation, Miss Crouter had dinner on the Crouter. Her brother, Robert, now 16, hopes to enter Annapolis in the near future to follow the family naval tradition.

C.I.O. May Quit WLB Over Antistrike Bill

voke criminal penalties including fines up to $5000 and a year in jail.

The attitude of the American Federation of Labor on the question could not be learned, but it was recalled that Green at a recent press conference indicated that the A. F. of L. would refuse to comply with any bills aimed at labor which it believed to be unconstitutional.

He made the remark to explain the A. F. of L.'s decision to disapprove bills containing restrictions on unions passed by five States, but added in response to questions that he would take the same position with respect to an Act of Congress that Joseph Padway, general counsel of the A. F. of L., deems unconstitutional.

To date, labor has taken pains to point out that its participation in the War Labor Board and other Government agencies has been on a purely voluntary basis—stemming from labor's pledge to refrain from striking for the duration. Generally, key labor officials have staked their authority and prestige in persuading striking local unions to keep the pledge.

However, if their counsels advise them that they will in effect become law enforcement officers by voting on the WLB, the labor members may withdraw from the board, informed quarters said.

The question may take on considerable importance with respect to the coal wage controversy now before WLB for final decision.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, has repeatedly defied the board and refused to comply with its orders. A possible unfavorable decision in the coal case might present the first test of the new measure, since the mines already are in Government hands.

Lewis has set June 20 as a deadline for the signing of a new contract or the start of a third general coal strike.

Bittner was said to have suggested hat a substantial concession be made to Lewis to meet his demand for "partal-to-portal" pay for underground miners, simultaneously providing for an eight-hour day for men above ground, thus giving many of them compensation at straight time rates for another hour a day.

WLB took no action on this proposal but instead instructed Board Chairman William H. Davis to prepare a brief on legal considerations involved in the controversy.

Officials believed that these legal questions will prevent the miners from receiving a substantial wage increase.

If a meager award is made in the coal case at a time when the board is threatened with withdrawal of its labor members, the situation could play into the hands of Lewis, who has repeatedly tried to by-pass the board.

There was some possibility that labor would use the threat to leave the board as a means of warning the President that failure to veto the bill would have unexpected results.

The attitude of the President on the measure was not known, although congressional sources had indicated that the bill was passed with the approval of the White House.

In the picture, however, was the possibility that the President desired the measure as a club to use over Lewis to secure compliance with the WLB decision.

It was pointed out that the President could withhold any action until after Lewis' June 20 deadline. The War Labor Board expects to have its final decision completed early this week.

WLB is expected to proceed to a final decision in the coal case without waiting to receive copies of the agreement between Lewis and Charles O'Neill, president of the Central Pennsylvania Coal Producers Association.

The agreement was slated to be presented to the board at 10 a. m. Saturday, but O'Neill secured additional time after conferences were unable to agree to an indemnity clause to protect the coal operators from lawsuits brought under the Fair Labor Standards Act. O'Neill and Lewis had agreed to settle their dispute over "portal to portal" pay with an increase of $1.30 a day, subject to approval by WLB.

Roosevelt Praises States' War Effort

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, June 13—The American people "can take pride," President Roosevelt declared today in a letter to Governor Herbert R. O'Conor, "in the manner in which this great democratic people, operating through its regularly constituted public authorities has converted our governments for war just as industry has converted its plants, its factories and its mills."

Addressing Maryland's chief executive as chairman of the Governors' Conference which is scheduled to hold its thirty-fifth annual meeting in Columbus Ohio next Sunday, the President stated, "The time is critical in that everything that we have developed, everything that we believe and cherish, is threatened as never before."

"The States understand this, and for more than two years they have been devoting their efforts and dedicating their resources to the defense program and the prosecution of the war," the President said, adding, "As never before in our history, Federal, State, and local Governments have been coordinating their efforts and focusing their activities upon one all-important common objective—winning the war."

He congratulated O'Conor who is scheduled to preside over the three-day annual meeting in Columbus, "and the States that you represent for the job already done, and I look forward confidently to even closer cooperation and more effective operation as the Nation, the States, and the localities—all composed of the same people—press on to victory.

"I think we can take pride in the manner in which this great democratic people, operating through its regularly constituted public authorities has converted our governments for war just as industry has converted its plants, its factories and its mills. We can have justifiable pride in what we have done so far, but only if such pride serves as a stimulant for the more arduous tasks that lie ahead—tasks to which we have put our hand, and tasks which we mean to see through."

hundred and a few days ago another 10,000 pounds for $13.40."

"Pretty soft out here, eh?"

"Yes. I'm not my own boss though. I've got to take orders from Sargent. He's head of the whole farm detail. He got raised up to be warrant officer."

Warrant Officer Sargent's house is not far from another hog farm, operated by a "Mr. Wallace" and also located on Government property. Captain Ware's own house overlooks the York River, on one side of which is a good-sized garden cultivated for the commandant by the Seabees, who also lend a hand with other agricultural chores when necessary.

Captain Ware, when questioned, said that he was helping out the meat situation locally; that most of his hogs were sold for barbecue recreational purposes for the men right on the place, but some did go to the market in Richmond.

Even so, with Government land, Government labor, and Government machinery, it's a situation to make most hog raisers green with envy.

Good Neighbor Press

DURING THE Food Conference at Hot Springs, the Brazilian delegate wanted to get in touch with newsmen, to release a story of interest to South America. But newsmen, according to the President's edict, were not allowed inside the hotel. So Dr. Joao Carlos Muniz was obliged to telephone the press quarters, asking to be interviewed.

AP Newsman Ovid Martin came to the hotel porch and met the Brazilian there. It was a chilly, rainy day, and the Brazilian had no topcoat. But he could not take Martin inside the hotel, because of the ruling that delegates should not be "molested" by newsmen.

Result was that Muniz and Martin shivered on the porch for the length of the interview, Muniz catching a severe cold.

Saving Uncle Sam's Shekels

HERE IS A simple suggestion which would save the Government millions:

As the law stands, a man coming into the Government cannot be hired for the figure of $5000 or $6000, but must get one or another of the fixed Government ratings, such as $4600 or $5600 or $6500.

Many a man has come to Washington from the business world in the last few years, willing to work for $5000. But there is no Government rating at that figure, so he is offered $4600, and if he won't take that, he must be paid $5600.

Likewise, if he is a $7000 man, willing to work for that figure but not for less, he must be given $8000.

Literally hundreds of men have come into the War Production Board at salaries $500 or $1000 more than they would have accepted, simply because the Reclassification Act of 1923 establishes the figure of $4600, $5600 and $6500 with no elasticity.

The same waste results in the field of promotion. To keep good men these days, Government agencies are obliged to give promotions without waiting for the 2½ year period required by civil service.

So the agencies resort to evasion. They reclassify the employe by writing up a new job for him at a higher salary level. He might be satisfied with a $500 raise, but reclassification means that the gets at least $900 more, or even $1500 more.

A simple change of the law would save hundreds of dollars in thousands of cases.

Hearing Called On Bill to Provide D. C. Congressman

A hearing will be held Wednesday at 10 a. m. before the House of Representatives Judiciary Subcommittee on a bill to provide the District with a representative in Congress, it was announced yesterday.

Sponsors of the bill pointed out yesterday that if the legislation is successful it will be the first time since 1874 that residents of the District have been represented in Congress.

The District Delegate Committee, which has offices in the Woodward Building, is presided over by Attorney E. Barrett Prettyman as chairman; Merlo J. Pusey of The Washington Post, as vice chairman and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, as executive secretary.

The bill requires that the delegate be a citizen of the United States for at least seven years and a resident of the District for five years preceding his election. Election would be held every second year on the even numbered year.

You see what you pay the NATIONAL way

Everybody benefits by the use of this National Cash Register—customer, clerk and store owner. This is just as true in the smallest food store as in a super market.

Even when a new clerk replaces an experienced checker who has gone to war or into war work, you see what you pay for each item of your purchase as it is being checked. Then you see a mechanically added total in large, clear figures at the top of the register. And you get an itemized and totaled NCR Receipt which enables you to recheck all your purchases at home.

Including all the new details of point rationing, it's done quickly . . . easily . . . and accurately—to speed you on your way without delay.

Congress Hopes To Clear Bills, Quit July 10

By Arthur Hachten
International News Service Staff Writer

Speaker Sam Rayburn last night set July 10 to 13 as his goal for beginning of an adjournment of Congress until September 13, first Monday after Labor Day.

While the legislators are yearning to take a summer vacation, after more than two years of continuous toil, Rayburn warned that only through a concerted drive will it be possible to dispose of the remaining mountain of legislation so that legislators may go home and commune with their constituents.

President Roosevelt has not indicated he has any major recommendations to submit that would interfere with the program of Democratic and Republican leaders to take a respite.

But confronting Congress is a log-jam of appropriation bills to carry on Government departments during the fiscal year beginning July 1. Leaders were doubtful last night that all would be passed before then. They said it may become necessary to pass resolutions to continue briefly appropriations made for the present fiscal year.

Right-of-way will be given Army and Navy bills. The House has yet to pass and send to the Senate the War Department bill, which will carry appropriations totalling about 72 billion dollars, of which about 13 billion dollars will be a reappropriation of funds that were alotted for the present fiscal year, but not yet spent.

Urgent Deficiency Bill

The Navy Department's annual appropriation bill, carrying about 25 billion dollars, is in conference between the Senate and House and undoubtedly will be sent to President Roosevelt for signature before the July 1 deadline.

Deadlocked before a conference committee is an urgent deficiency appropriation bill, carrying funds to cover contingent expenses of executive agencies for the remainder of the present fiscal year.

This measure includes a provision to forbid President Roosevelt to draw upon war emergency funds voted to him by Congress, to finance new agencies created by executive order or to supplement funds of existing agencies, who have not been given all the money they sought from Congress. While both branches of Congress are in agreement in principle upon the provision there are differences over details of its application.

Also holding up passage of the deficiency bill is a deadlock over whether the pay of three Federal employes should be stopped on the ground they hold subversive views.

The employes involved are Dr. Robert Morss Lovett, Interior Department secretary for the Virgin Islands, whose pay is $5800 a year, and Goodwin Watson and William E. Dodd, jr., Federal Communications Commission employes, receiving $6500 and $3200 annual salary, respectively.

The House approved the stop-pay provision, but the Senate by a vote of 59 to 0 rejected it. Both branches appeared to be standing pat, but a compromise may be worked out.

A showdown in the Senate today on whether that body should pass upon the qualifications of about 28,000 Federal employes receiving salaries of $4500 a year or more, was foreshadowed last night.

Acting Democratic Leader Lister Hill of Alabama disclosed that the McKellar bill to provide for Senate veto power on those Federal employes will be considered when the Senate reconvenes at noon. Administration chieftains have marked the bill for death in a House pigeon-hole.

How WATER Can aid KIDNEYS

Backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, swelling, headaches, acidity may all be caused when disorder of kidneys means poisonous matter is not passed off. America's famous mineral water—Mountain Valley from Hot Springs, Arkansas, often helps to expel these excess wastes the natural way.

Mountain Valley has aided thousands suffering from Rheumatic, Kidney, Stomach and Bladder disorders. You will like its pure, delicious taste. Not carbonated, not laxative—you drink it just as visitors do at Hot Springs.

Order a case of this celebrated mineral water today. Phone ME. 1062, or write Mountain Valley Water Co., 904 12th St. N.W.

for guests who did not come in automobiles. Betty Draper, a 10-year-old with blonde pigtails, jingled 55 cents in her hand with the proud announcement that she was "doing pretty good tonight."

Sheila Umansky, 1742 Wisconsin Avenue, a competitor in the hailing of taxis, jumped to help a kindly old gentleman in white coat who patted her head when a taxi from Wisconsin Avenue arrived promptly before the door. Sheila's 6-year-old sister, Eileen, was assisting, catching guests at the gate if the older girl were busy at the corner.

"Rich Folks Get By"

Mrs. Blanche Umansky, mother of the two girls, a plump little woman who had come out in her house dress to look across the street at the party, complained: 'It isn't right. I took my kids out to Glen Echo today and spent a good part of the time getting out there on a rickety streetcar. These rich folks can get by with anything while the poor have to mind the laws."

Montgomery County Police of the Silver Spring (Md.) substation Saturday night took the license plate numbers of approximately 117 automobiles parked at the Silver Spring Lions Club charity carnival on Georgia Avenue, near the District Line.

The cars listed included a number of Washington automobiles, they reported. The names and addresses of owners will be turned over to rationing board authorities, police said.

Lions Club officials last night pointed out that buses and street cars can be utilized to reach the carnival with only one block of walking and urged those attending not to use their automobiles but to walk or use public transportation.

Supplies Adequate

Washington gasoline supplies during the past week were ample to meet the needs of the city within the frame of the gas rationing program, a spokesman for the American Automobile Association said yesterday.

But he was unable to give any estimate as to the supply that could be expected during the coming week. Each day must take care of itself, it was explained.

That motorists are getting sufficient gasoline was indicated by the increase in the number of calls received for tire and other services. While a portion of this increase was attributable to the fact that all tires are wearing thin, it also indicated a more widespread use of cars in general, it was pointed out.

Mission Plans Discussed By Adventists

Postwar plans for preparation of missionaries to enter foregin fields were discussed at ceremonies which opened the summer session of the Theological Seminary of the General Conference, Seventh Day Adventists, held last night at the seminary chapel in Takoma Park, D. C.

Prof. M. E. Kern, president of the seminary, welcomed 100 students. They will begin a nine-week course today, concentrating on foreign languages. Nine couples will take up the Arabic, and 16 will major in European languages.

The need to spread Christianity in Europe when peace comes was pointed out by Prof. W. E. Howell, secretary to the Rev. J. L. McElhaney, president of the world-wide headquarters.

Chessie Writes a Letter to the Editor

To the Editor of the Washington Post

Sir:

EVEN a railroad kitten gets around now and then. And I have lately heard some questions asked and comments made about our railroads that have inspired me to write you this letter.

I suppose it is perfectly natural that people who see the enormous load of traffic our railroads are moving in wartime—people who watch millions of tons of freight and thousands of men in arms go rolling by—should say: "I'll bet the roads are coining money these days."

It seems to me that the truth of this question is something every American ought to know.

Nearly everyone has read or heard that during the recent years of depression the railroads had extreme difficulty making ends meet. In the twelve years following 1929, thirty-seven Class I railroads sought relief from their troubles in bankruptcy. Others staggered along under heavy burdens of debt. And the average earnings of all Class I railroads, for that period, were only 2.2% on investment.

But what many people do not know is that, even in 1942, the American railroads earned only a moderate return on investment.

Railroad traffic increased enormously, of course. But so did operating costs, and so did taxes. And the average earnings, for all Class I railroads, in our first year of war, were only five and a half per cent.

Even the railroad kitten, Mr. Editor, can see that this is not a profiteer's wage.

It is almost the same percentage as the earnings that were fixed by the government for the railroads during the last war. It is within what Congress declared in 1920 to be a fair earning on railroad value. And the Interstate Commerce Commission has repeatedly recognized the principle that a fair return should be gauged by the average earnings over a period; that the roads should be allowed to make up in good years for the lean.

Mine is a small voice. But this is a free country. And it gets my fur up to hear people undervalue our railroads.

Those who do have only to look around them to see how tremendous a part in our national crisis is being taken by cars and coaches and engines—and by the men who run them. For transport is the lifeblood of our war effort.

We have reason to be thankful for the strength of our railroads. And equally good reason, with a view to the years ahead, to see that they continue to be strong and sound institutions.

Lampedusa

Lampedusa, another stepping stone to the Italian mainland and Hitler's European fortress, is now securely in Allied hands. More swiftly than we had dared to hope, the carefully planned offensive of the United Nations is unfolding and being realized. Again our overwhelming air superiority in the Mediterranean has been made evident.

Mercilessly pounded by ships and by planes, Lampedusa, like the more highly touted and heavily fortified island of Pantelleria, was at last forced to raise the white flag. The Italian people need feel no shame at its surrender. The garrison fought and endured cruel punishment, yielding only after its guns had been silenced and continued resistance was clearly of no avail.

The handwriting now appears to be written on the sky in flaming letters for Sicily, Sardinia and even for Italy itself. The Italian people can honorably heed the invitation addressed to them a few days ago by President Roosevelt—to revolt against their Fascist government and its Nazi overlords. They are reaping now the whirlwind sowed for them by Mussolini's arrogance and folly and by their own supine acceptance of Fascist ideology. Inexorably, that whirlwind will grow in fury and intensity, leveling the lovely, sunlit land and the peace-loving people who once, in happier days, were our allies. It can be arrested only if Italians themselves will seek regeneration by striking against the forces that enslave them. Allied armies are forcing open the door to Italian freedom.

Mr. Nelson's Report

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson reminds us that the "American industrial system can be justifiably proud of an astonishing display of economic muscle." Today, he says, we are turning out nearly as much material "measured in dollar value, as we ever produced for our peacetime needs—and we have enough industrial power left over to keep civilian standards of living at a level higher than many of us dared hope for."

The astounding increase in war expenditures from 59 billion dollars in 1942 to an estimated 106 billions this year is indicative of this rapid expansion. Even more revealing are the indices of industrial output which have reached levels that seemed unattainable a few years ago. For instance, the Federal Reserve Board's index of total industrial output (physical volume) which dipped to 80 per cent of the 1935-39 average in 1938 is now above 200. It shows more than 100 per cent increase over the five-year base period. And of course that average is much below the actual rate of increase for many types of war products and equipment.

There is evidence, however, that the limit to our aggregate productive capacity has almost been reached, as shown by the almost stationary position of the Reserve Board index in recent months. Formerly it was possible to expand our output of war materials at a record rate without greatly curtailing the total amounts of goods and services available for civilians, even though certain kinds of articles became very scarce or unobtainable. But from this time forward the pinch of civilian shortages is going to be much more keenly felt. Thus far, Mr. Nelson asserts, the United States has enjoyed higher living standards than it did before the war, and despite some deprivations, he concludes that per capita consumption in most areas will remain higher this year than in 1939. Obviously these generalizations do not apply to people in formerly favored economic groups whose living standards have unquestionably suffered severely.

As war expenditures continue to mount it is inevitable that all classes of civilians will be compelled to lower their living standards, since they will be receiving a decreasing proportion of a no longer elastic total output of goods and services. Moreover, their deprivations will not take the form of going without a little of everything they desire; they will be compelled to get along with very much less of some essential articles, such as clothing, textiles, household fuels, furniture and transportation. Thus the consumption per capita of clothing is expected to fall 23 per cent by the second half of this year, household fuels are slated for a 20 per cent drop, and furniture for a 40 per cent reduction.

The Nelson report serves a double purpose: it prepares civilians for the harder times that lie ahead and it shows that the sacrifices they are being called upon to make are a direct and indispensable aid to our war production effort. For proof we have only to look at the facts and figures cited in the report and the victories that our better equipped combat forces are winning for us.

Aimed At Obstruction

Some Senators were not wholly satisfied with the Connally-Harness bill when they sent it to the President by a vote of 55 to 22. The conferees had not done the best possible job of reconciling the Senate and House bills. Yet both the House and Senate showed good judgment in approving the legislation by large majorities. For the authority of the United States to carry on the war effectively had been challenged and there is no reasonable alternative to the imposition of penalties upon obstructionists who recklessly use their power to cripple war industries.

In our opinion the chief defect in the final draft of the bill is Section 8, which instructs the National Labor Relations Board to take secret ballots among employes who are threatening to strike "on the question whether they will permit any such interruption of war production." Senator Thomas of Utah is right in saying that this language implies legalization of strikes in war plants if they are approved by a majority of the workers. If no such implication is intended, then the section is indeed mischievous, for it lures working men into voting on a course of action which the Government will not tolerate in any event. We think the conferees showed very poor judgment in leaving this provision in the bill in preference to the constructive section of the House bill requiring registration of labor unions.

In spite of that fact, the general effect of the bill is good. It puts the obstructive minority in the labor movement on notice that it is not above the law. Nothing in the bill interferes with the individual's right to leave his job, even in a war plant, if he wishes to do so. But no one can organize a strike against public authority vital to the war effort without making himself liable to stiff punishment. In short, the right of labor to act collectively against employers remains intact, but the right to act collectively against the Government is emphatically ruled out. The only amazing thing about this action is that a year and a half of war and a major challenge to Federal authority were necessary to effect this clarification of a basic principle of government.

We think that organized labor would be well advised to accept the measure in the spirit in which it was enacted. Unquestionably it reflects the general wishes of the people. This does not mean that the rank and file of citizens are less interested in the welfare of organized labor, but that they are more interested in winning the war. Labor only hurts itself when it stands behind or even seems to support obstructionists who would cripple war industry to win higher wages or more power. Out in California last week the employes of the Douglas Aircraft Company's Elsegundo plant voted in an NLRB election for no union in preference to either a former A. F. of L. affiliate or the C. I. O. That straw in the wind emphasizes the damage that strikes and obstruction can do to the cause of organized labor.

President Roosevelt can thus help the cause of labor as well as the cause of winning the war by promptly signing the Connally-Harness bill and asking for universal compliance with its terms. And if all unions will now fully respect their no-strike pledge, the penalties of the act will never need to be invoked.

Changes In China

The alarm manifested in China recently over the Japanese thrust in the Upper Yangtse region west of Ichang has given way to jubilation over what appears to have been a real Chinese victory. The enemy was routed and driven back with heavy losses, including the loss of 31 fighter planes which were shot down by a combined Chinese and American air force. Jubilation is, indeed, in order. But the point should not be lost to sight that the situation in which China finds herself is still extremely critical. Even the Ichang victory was offset to an important degree by the fact that the retreating Japanese devastated an important rice-growing region. China is still a long way from being out of the woods. This fact the Allied high command no doubt realizes, which is why there is every reason to believe that increased air power to China is now high on the priority lists. Unfortunately, even with the best intentions in the world, it is impossible to send very much in the way of supplies into China. But to the extent that aid can be flown in, it will be. And there is proof in what happened at Ichang that even a little is likely to pay heavy dividends.

Embattled Bloc

The vetoed Bankhead bill guaranteeing farmers full parity payments on their products exclusive of benefit payments reappeared as an amendment to the agricultural appropriations bill, but was thrown out by the Senate's refusal to consider it. It is useless to go over the familiar arguments which led the President to veto the measure last April. But it is worth noting the tenacity with which the sponsors of schemes for raising farm prices cling to their plans. Although the fate of the entire stabilization program hangs in the balance at the present time, with labor growing increasingly restive under the pressure of rising living costs, the Senator from Alabama continues to press for still higher farm, hence food, prices.

To agree to the Bankhead amendment, Senator Bailey said, would be to "come to the aid of John L. Lewis and give him exactly the club he needs to get his pay raises." To be sure, Mr. Lewis is doing extremely well for himself and his miners without the aid of the Bankhead bill to reinforce his complaints of rising food costs. However, the Bankhead bill is typical of the kind of farm bloc legislation that has boosted food prices and given impetus to the spiraling upward movement of wages. The untimely attempt to resurrect it is a warning that the farm bloc is still a menace to the stabilization program.

Dangerous Cleavage

A survey conducted among soldiers in North Africa by the Army newspaper, Stars and Stripes, revealed a strong majority feeling of anger and resentment toward the coal miners at home who went out on strike in defiance of their Government. Hostility between men in uniform and men on the production line appears to be growing. The coal strike has, of course, given this feeling its greatest impetus. But the feeling itself is one which may carry with it consequences even more dangerous than any strike. Inevitably it is reciprocated by the workers at home who believe that the soldiers misunderstand their motives. Out of this mutual distrust a tragic social cleavage might develop.

We shall need full national unity for the problems of peace as well as for the prosecution of the war. Ours is an Army of civilians. When it is at last demobilized, its members will return to their places in mines and factories and farms. The worst scar that the war could leave upon our society would be a permanent fissure between the men who served in the fighting forces and those who served at home. This is a possible consequence of their conduct which the miners would do well to bear in mind. It should be remembered also by all the rest of us. We shall do no service to our country by aggravating resentment. The greatest measure of patience, tolerance and understanding is needed.

Farm Contracts

The basic problem which confronted the United Nations Food Conference stemmed from the fact that the world does not now produce enough food for the adequate sustenance of all its population. Accordingly the production section of the conference urged a "marked expansion" in agricultural production. It pointed out, however, that this expansion must not be of a haphazard nature. It will be important, declared the report of the section, "for each nation progressively to adjust the use of its available agricultural production resources to conform with a long-term coordinated production plan for the best use of those resources on a world scale." This means, in short, that we must encourage our farmers to plant and harvest specifically designated crops in proportion to predetermined world needs.

But how are American farmers, for example, to know what foods they ought to grow? How are they to be sure, if they switch to the desired crops, that they will find a market for them at reasonable prices? A simple, practical answer to these questions was offered the other day by James G. Patton, president of the National Farmers Union. He believes that the Federal Government should enter into contracts individually with the Nation's six million farm units in much the same way as it enters into contracts with industrial plants for the production of war weapons and munitions. It seems a staggering proposal. But as a matter of fact it isn't even novel. The AAA already has contracts with nearly the entire farm roster.

Under Mr. Patton's plan, farmers would agree to plant stated acreages of needed crops. In return the Government, through the Food Administrator, would assure them of four things: A minimum price on each of the designated items; crop insurance coverage to yield an income equal to what they would have received from an average sale of the normal crop in their area; credit necessary to begin production, and technical assistance, together with fertilizer, seed, feed, machinery, fuel and labor needed to get the job done.

These are real production incentives, more solid than subsidies, more effective than exhortation. Farming is, at best, a hazardous occupation. If farmers are to shift to new types of production, they unquestionably need governmental assistance and direction. For the mobilization of American agriculture during the war, as well as for the rehabilitation period which must follow, this sort of compact seems essential.

SUNSET CONCERT

The music is welling out across the shore
Where the quiet people sit and listen and think,
Oh, I can see them in their ranks; they have come once more,
Leaning for what but sound on the river's brink.

It is as if they asked that it would not cease—
A music and sound and color, as the dark shades draw.
They drink of this sound as one who partakes of peace.
As the water darkens, the faces are rapt with awe.

And the black nets of cloud come on—they give no heed;
Caught as by chains, they must not move for the rain.
I see them shaken as one, like a storm-whipped reed
By the music, the music that comes this way again.

New Deal Control

By Mark Sullivan

Waning Influence

IN TWO SENTENCES last week, Mr. Bernard M. Baruch answered the question that is at the heart of Washington's war management, a question that is asked over and over, but rarely answered fully or clearly. The question, as often put, is, "What is wrong at Washington?"

Mr. Baruch was not answering the question consciously—his answer was implied in his point of view. The circumstances were these: President Roosevelt had set up a new super-agency, the Office of War Mobilization, and had put at the head of it former Supreme Court Justice James F. Byrnes. Then Mr. Byrnes asked Mr. Baruch to serve as as an adviser. Accepting, Mr. Baruch said:

"In taking on this work, I am assuming that the Office of War Mobilization will be effective, and that it is to be the final expression of the Commander in Chief, and, therefore, it will not be bypassed or sidetracked. Justice Byrnes, if not blocked, will improve things. . . ."

The question now becomes, who does the bypassing and sidetracking, and blocking? From Mr. Baruch's phrase, "the final expression of the Commander in Chief," readers might assume, it is the President who does it—that the President sets up an agency and gives it authority, but later reduces the authority or otherwise makes changes. Common observation, however, puts the primary responsibility on persons who influence the President. As it is put by Mr. Bert Andrews of the New York Herald Tribune: "In the past there have been sound reasons for conjecturing that the real reason some of the previous super-agencies did not work was that a man would take a super-job in the blissful belief that he had full powers, only to find that having 'full powers' meant little or nothing as compared with having the President's ear."

WHO HAS the President's ear? That is a question which newsmen hesitate to answer. For any newsman or commentator hesitates to make a statement unless he can make it concretely and in provable form. And in the nature of things it is hardly possible to say, at any one time, just who compose the group that most influences the President.

It is safe to say the influencers are New Dealers. But here again one runs into a baffling welter of inexactness. New Dealers are of many types of mind—they range from extreme left-wingers, who in some cases almost certainly believe in one form or another of collectivism, to moderates who wish for nothing more extreme than a desirable improvement of the American system of individualism and privately owned business. Of the more radical New Dealers, it is safe to say they have a spirit of suspicion, or hostility, or grudging tolerance, toward businessmen, and also toward old-school Democrats and Republicans.

Here we come to the heart of the trouble. As we got into our war effort, it became desirable to enlist businessmen, because they knew the technique of production. It became desirable also, for the sake of unity if nothing else, to enlist some Republicans. And for the sake of cooperation with Congress, it became desirable to give greater consideration to old-school Democrats, who overwhelmingly dominate the majority party in Congress.

Toward these conservative groups, the more ardent New Dealers adopted a policy. It was to the effect that on any war agency there should be a majority of New Dealers. This was to prevent non-New Dealers from adopting policies or practices affecting the permanent relation between Government and business. Search of the early war agencies would show, as a prevailing rule, something like four New Dealers to three non-New Dealers. Presently the pressure for efficiency made it necessary to give more power to the business type. For nearly a year there was an attempt at exact division of authority between New Dealer and non-New Dealer. That was when the then supreme agency for war production consisted of two men—Businessman William S. Knudsen and Labor Leader Sidney Hillman.

On the new super-agency, OWM, there are two old-school Democrats, placatory toward the New Deal—the head, Mr. Byrnes, and former Congressman Fred M. Vinson. There are two Republicans, Secretaries Stimson of War and Knox of the Navy. There is one businessman, Mr. Donald Nelson. There is one New Dealer, Mr. Harry Hopkins.

Selfish Easterners

When you write about cars passing by people waiting for buses, you remark this could not happen out West, and ask what is the matter with us Easterners. Why do you assume that all, or even a majority of the selfish drivers were "Easterners"? I had supposed that we had as many people here from the West as from the East—even more. Certainly your editor didn't think that these drivers were Washingtonians? There are such animals but we all know they are few and far between. So when you speak of selfish drivers in Washington, you are denouncing a cross section of the United States, and not natives of this city.

The Flag

By Paul Schubert

Symbol Of Union

MILLIONS of American men and women now in the service of their country will come home with a new conception of the flag.

In the military world, the flag has almost mystic significance—it is all bound up with the conception of duty of selflessness, of sacrifice . . . with the sense that the individual in uniform is under a sworn obligation to give his life for his country—that is, to offer his own survival in the effort to ensure his country's survival.

The scene at sunset, as the colors come down, is one whose quiet beauty grooves itself deep into the tablets of memory. It is never more impressive than on the quarterdeck of a man-of-war lying in some foreign port halfway around the world from home. To warn that it is coming, there is a small preliminary bustle. The bugle calls "Guard of the Day" and "Band." A knot of Marines comes up the companionway, buckling belts and adjusting uniforms, to fall in in miniature parade. The ship's band takes its place, and the whole group marches aft.

THEN AT the instant of sundown, the bugle blows piercing "Attention"—the Marines' rifles slap to the Present Arms, and the band crashes out the anthem, remote echo of sunset ceremonies that follow the sun around the world.

The sailor or the officer, standing on deck, facing aft, saluting rigidly, feels a strange swelling pride—the consciousness of being an active part of this Nation's history. For that instant, time stands still, and he has a vivid sense of history—of the part battles play in history . . . of the oneness of all America's struggles, from the magnificent defiance of the Declaration of Independence to the giant power organization of our 1943 war.

Slowly the colors reach the deck and are ceremoniously gathered in. The music is over . . . The bugle blows "Carry on" and the spell is broken.

But never forgotten.

In time of war there is less theater. The band may be replaced by a single bugler, or by no bugler at all. The flagstaff has been stowed inboard in a ship clear for action; the colors are aloft at the gaff. The ceremony on a fighting ship shabby with hard work and scarred by battle, is more impressive than ever.

The country for which the flag stands is more precious than ever.

We are not the only country with a flag—or the only country which salutes the flag at sundown ceremony.

When the ships of many countries are together in harbor, the sounds of many different anthems cross the anchorage at sunset—men in many uniforms pause reverently, each before his particular bit of bunting.

EACH MAN feels much the same sensations . . . although to one they mean the wheat fields of Dakota, to another the green of Devon, to another the reaches of the Don.

Nationalism is a powerful force, a primitive force, a tremendous factor in the world's affairs. It is a compelling factor in the unity of our enemies—the compactness with which they do battle. The German is a human unit of his Deutsches Reich, the Italian has learned the past glories of Italia . . . the Japanese sees Nippon as the earth's chosen country. Our enemies have made nationalism into a religion, arguing that the state is all, the individual nothing.

We have tried, through our history, to see nationalism in broader terms than this.

Our flag means union. Our flag symbolizes the fact that 13 colonies sacrificed a portion of their separate identity in becoming 13 States, and thereby acquired a new strength and charter as United States.

Britain's Union Jack is another flag of union . . . a flag which symbolized at first the union of England, Scotland and Wales, and in time grew fat beyond the original union to a world-wide conception of a commonwealth of nations linked together for the common good.

The banner of Soviet Russia likewise symbolizes an experiment in union—the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics, many states spread over a giant area of Asia.

These and many other flags of the United Nations have come to have new meaning to us as the colors of our Allies.

It would be a splendid thing if we had, apart from our national colors, a flag of the United Nations to symbolize what we are trying to accomplish in this united effort of ours.

Listen to Paul Schubert Tonight at 10:30 on WOL.

"No-Deferment"

I am employed in a professional capacity by a Federal agency of such secrecy that it cannot be named. We are doing vital work for the war effort. Because of the blanket no-deferment policy for Government employes, no deferment is asked for those of us who are called for induction into the armed forces. Yet, within a few days after our donning uniforms, our agency requests that we be assigned to the same jobs we held as civilians. And we are! If the Army's need for manpower is so great that we cannot be deferred because of the nature of our work how, then, can it follow by any logic that the Army itself should be willing to reassign us as soldiers to the same jobs we left as civilians?

Most of us left good positions to come to Washington; many of us brought our wives and families. We came because we wanted to help win the war by doing work for which we had the best training and experience. After induction our Army pay, even with subsistence and dependency allotments, usually amounts to only one-half or one-third of our civilian pay.

It is high time that the proper Government authorities became aware of the public's dissatisfaction with the unfairness and inconsistencies of the muddled draft situation. Most Americans are intelligent enough to realize that a man does not necessarily have to be in uniform to serve his country best in the war effort.

DISGUSTED.

War Bond Sales

With respect to your editorial in this morning's Post urging the mobilization of air raid wardens for the sale of war bonds, I offer a suggestion which may make such plan more practicable and effective. In order to attain the most satisfactory results the functions of the wardens should not be restricted to obtaining mere pledges to purchase war bonds. A pledge is only an expression of an intention to purchase.

I suggest that these volunteer workers be authorized to accept signed orders for bonds upon a C. O. D. basis, the Government to assume the payment of the C. O. D. charges and other incidental expenses. A signed C. O. D. order constitutes a much stronger commitment than a mere pledge to purchase.

The C. O. D. plan would prove as effective as it is simple, and under it the civilian-defense employes could be welded into a potent sales organization with a minimum of administrative difficulty. J. G.

Sailor's Mail

For more than a month now I've looked forward to getting to this particular port in hopes of getting some mail. There was none. And that means it'll be another two months without any news from the States. The mail situation is nearly tragic for small, itinerant ships. No one seems to care much whether we get mail or not and our best efforts cannot get any results. I sometimes wonder if the Navy Department knows where we are. Guess it must. I have received one letter since the tenth of February. I wish someone at home could straighten the mail situation out for us small ships. We're not so important, I grant, as the battleships and cruisers, but we're as human and our morale can slip a little when we get the feeling—as we have of late—that a great deal is expected of us and not much given in return.

Mail from home is one of the most potent forces for the strengthening of morale. It makes the whole dismal, dirty, cruel life we live seem brighter, it makes us remember the freedom and the happiness and the beauty of the land we're fighting for. But when there's no mail for such interminably long time as this last has been, we wonder. Was there ever any life but this one of war? Were there ever mothers and girl friends in that hazy place called home? Or is this a kind of half remembrance of a dream we had last night? SAILOR.

Purchase Airport

As a national and Westchester taxpayer, it would seem appropriate that a full and complete investigation should be immediately instituted by the Army and appropriate parties in connection with the Purchase Airport.

When accusations are made that maps were altered and submitted to the Army to influence the selection of this airport site, and furthermore when rumors are rife that local political interests sold this property—this should be sufficient grounds to warrant Federal action. However, when, in addition the Purchase airsite was selected because it would only cost approximately $900,000 for the Federal Government to develop, and the existing airsite at Valhalla (known as the Reynolds tract) would have cost $1,500,000 to extend—and to date over five million dollars has been appropriated for the development of the Purchase airsite, what legitimate reason can there be for any Army engineers or the C. A. A. to have made a mistake of more than 500 per cent?

Furthermore, this airport was originally planned as an interceptor base for use in the war effort and was to be completed by October, 1942, as per contract. It might be interesting to find out why it will probably not be completed until 1944.

As one who will be asked to support this airport in Westchester and one who is contributing substantially in taxes to the Federal Government, it is obvious that this malodorous and disgraceful situation should have immediate investigation by the proper authorities.

"Objectors"

Last year in June on Flag Day I was traveling in a distant State and had opportunity to visit a conscientious objector's camp on that day, where they had 112 inmates and expected 14 on that day. I learned that most of the inmates were college graduates, and one of them accompanied me through the camp and made certain explanations.

First, we went by sleeping quarters and found colored and whites occuping the same rooms. The guide said the objectors had it as a rule to have no race or caste barriers. We walked back near the entrance, and on seeing the flag pole with no flag on it, and since it was Flag Day, I asked him why the flag had not been raised and he said he supposed they had forgotten it. There was no flag in sight anywhere.

When I was ready to leave I asked him what he expected to do after the war and what reference he would give in trying to get a job, and he made the remark, in substance, that with their college education and with so many of the boys being killed or lost in foreign lands that the objectors would have no trouble in getting jobs. A question here might be asked, and asked seriously, as to whether these conscientious or other objectors, avoiding military service in defense of their country, will acknowledge after the war that they were of this class and whether employers will be willing to give jobs to such men. I wonder if the flag will be raised on this June 14? N. K.

President and Taxes

By Ernest Lindley

Unified Inflation Control

THE PRESIDENT'S discussion of taxation at his two press conferences last week was, to say the least, not enlightening. Taxation is not one of the many fields in which Mr. Roosevelt is in his own right either an expert or a very creditable amateur. It has never seemed to attract and hold his intellectual and emotional interest.

LINDLEY

Among his annual budget and several special messages on taxes, some have been excellent—although placed together they do not reveal an orderly and penetrating understanding. Their quality has varied with the men whose advice happened to carry the most weight at the time. During the last two years, the President probably has given taxation even less personal attention than he did in peacetime. Moreover, he has let the Treasury carry the ball. On many occasions the Treasury has been many yards behind the main line of expert thought or has actually been running in the opposite direction.

However, the next objective of the President and the Treasury—to raise some 16 billion dollars annually from new or increased taxes—is in full accord with the bulk of expert opinion. Both Britain and Canada are paying more than half the current cost of the war out of taxation. Our present taxes cover only about one-third of the war's current costs. The inflationary gap is large and is still increasing.

THE PRESIDENT said last week that he is still opposed to a general sales tax. He added that he did not mean to rule out excise taxes on specific commodities. He cited the increase in the excise taxes on tobacco and liquor in Britain. Further increases in these taxes in the United States would help in their small way, but they would hardly make a good beginning on raising 16 billion dollars in additional revenue.

The President made no reference to the fact that the British have the equivalent of a general sales tax. They call it a "purchase tax." It is about 12 per cent on clothing and other necessities, apart from food and fuel, which are not taxed. On dishes and various other intermediate articles, it is 24 per cent. On outright luxuries, from cameras through jewelry, it is 50 per cent. A corresponding tax in this country would substantially reduce the inflationary gap.

As the President said, a sales tax hits the poorer people of the country, which means most of the people. But we already have a stiffly graduated tax on incomes and it cannot be increased much except in the lower brackets. The cost of the war will have to be borne by most of the people. If they don't bear it by taxation, they will bear it by inflation. The present danger is that they will bear it in both ways through failure to apply inflation control measures, including taxes, with enough vigor.

Last fall, as an alternative to the sales tax, the Treasury proposed a graduated tax on spending. This was worth more serious attention than it received from Congress. It was not at all the complicated tax which it was said to be by Senators and Representatives who had not bothered to examine it. And it can be collected simply along with the income tax.

But the sales tax also has its advantages, including the fact that you pay it as you go.

NO ONE TAX will yield the additional revenue which the President and the Treasury desire. A beginning on the next 16 billion dollars has been made by the unforgiven portion of the personal income tax on 1942 or 1943 (whichever is the lower), which is to be paid in two annual installments. Additional sums can be raised by closing such loopholes as the freedom from war taxation of tax-exempt securities. Some can be raised by increasing the inheritance taxes, some from new or higher special excise taxes. But the Treasury and Congress ineyitably will be forced to resort to a broader form of tax on spending—forced, that is, if they intend to raise a large additional amount of revenue.

Whether Congress can be induced to buckle down to serious work on a new tax bill this year is by no means certain. So far it has shown neither eagerness for the task nor real competence to perform it.

On the side of the Executive, there are encouraging signs that the Treasury is no longer to have the sole responsibility for drafting and recommending the Administration's tax program. James F. Byrnes, head of the newly created Office of War Mobilization, called a meeting on taxation, attended not only by a representative of the Treasury, but by Budget Director Harold D. Smith and Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson.

Mr. Byrnes is fully alive to the need for heavier taxes. So is his principal adviser, Bernard M. Baruch. Mr. Vinson was a tax specialist in Congress and is understood to be committed to vigorous efforts to narrow the inflationary gap. Budget Director Smith has been in the vanguard of the inflation-control movement. He was chiefly responsible for persuading the President to set forth an inflation control program of April, 1942.

When Mr. Byrnes became Stabilization Director last fall, it was widely assumed that he would have something to say about the tax program. The assumption proved to be erroneous. The Treasury won a special exemption, leaving a hole in the inflation-control front. It is possible, of course, that the Treasury will again win its fight to go on its own way. But, with his enlarged authority and enhanced prestige, Mr. Byrnes has promptly moved into action on this front, flanked by able men whose recommendations should be respected at the White House.

Greetings From Chiang

Allies Praised

By the Associated Press

Chungking, June 13.—Assurance of the final triumph of the Allies was the keynote of messages sent today by Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek to President Roosevelt, Prime Minister Churchill and Premier Stalin on the eve of United Nations Day, the United States Flag Day that was adopted last year for world-wide observance by countries opposed to the Axis.

"Never before," Chiang said in his message to the President, "have we of the United Nations stood so united—united in our determination to realize our common aims so solemnly proclaimed in our declaration.

Union Is Emphasized

"We not only pay tribute to your courageous, farsighted leadership, but we also do honor to your fighting force, whose gallant achievements in the East and in the West have brought final victory so much nearer and to the millions of American men and women on the home front whose sacrifice and devotion have made your great country the arsenal of democracy.

"China feels proud to be in the company of all freedom-loving nations, united in a grand alliance, to carry on this common struggle.

"Successes that have crowned the arms of the United States and those of other nations are making more certain each day the final triumph of the great cause to which we of the United Nations have dedicated ourselves."

In his message to Prime Minister Churchill the Generalissimo declared that "the grim determination and indomitable spirit which you impart to the direction of your war efforts in all theaters of war evoke our sincere admiration."

Brilliant Victories

"The brilliant victories gained by British arms and the significant successes achieved by the other United Nations are clear indications that this stupendous struggle in which we are engaged will surely end in the unconditional surrender of our enemies," he said.

Addressing Premier Stalin, the Chinese leader said: "The brilliant accomplishments of the Red army under your inspiring leadership are contributing greatly to the final triumph of the cause of the United Nations.

"I avail myself of this occasion to express anew to you my conviction that the day is drawing near when the steady and inexorable strength of the United Nations will finally bring about the collapse of aggressor nations."

Landis Urges Change in Control To Avoid Canned Food Famine

Urging transfer of food control to the Department of Agriculture, Representative Landis of Indiana, asserted yesterday there may be no canned goods for civilians next winter unless Administration methods are changed.

Landis is chairman of a Republican congressional food study subcommittee.

Canners, he said, are unable to obtain workers because of price ceilings and wage controls and "have received scant sympathy and consideration from the Government agencies concerned.

"The ultimate result," his statement continued, "will be that vegetables and fruits they are to can under present restrictions will hardly suffice for the armed services and lend-lease. The civilian population will be forced to do without and much of the 1943 pack will rot in the field for want of pickers."

Consumer May Suffer

[Economic Stabilization Director Vinson on Friday authorized payment of subsidies to vegetable packers to cover the cost of proposed wage increases pending before the War Labor Board.—Editor's Note.]

Landis added that unless pending legislation to transfer food functions from the Office of Price Administration to the Agriculture Department is enacted "the consumer is going to have to do much belt tightening next winter and the following summer."

He asserted canners who appeared before the committee "painted an alarming picture. They predict that many in the industry will be compelled to go out of business for the war's duration. Others, with sons in the service, are trying to carry on as a patriotic duty, despite the fact that they are losing money daily."

Gardeners Hopes Fade

Landis also asserted that hopes of owners of 21 million victory gardens that they would be able to can their own winter's food supply "fade before the great Washington bureaucracy.

"Home-grown vegetables and fruits, unless they are of the acid variety," he said, "cannot be safely canned without the use of pressure cookers. Recognizing this, the Government authorized the manufacture of 270,000 of these cookers. So far this year, only 21,000 of that number have been manufactured. And so, many of the people have been humbugged again by the New Deal.

"If the Administration's smart boys would devote more time in attempting at least a partial solution of the grave food problem instead of trying to promote their own pet theories, such as grade labeling, there would be more food and less foolishness in America."

Republican Accord Seen

Party's Postwar Policy

By Jack Bell

Associated Press Staff Writer

Predictions that the newly organized Republican postwar advisory committee will be able to agree on a basic declaration of the party's foreign policy came yesterday from senatorial members representing varying shades of opinion on international questions.

Senators Austin of Vermont, Vandenberg of Michigan and Taft of Ohio expressed confidence in separate interviews that divergent elements of the party can be brought together behind a simple, easily understood statement of Republican postwar aims.

Representing the internationalist wing which believes in full postwar collaboration with other countries, Senator Austin said a preliminary meeting of the congressional members of the committee last week had shown no fundamental difference of opinion that cannot be overcome.

Sees No Disagreement

"There is no disagreement on certain general interests that might be regarded as vital to the United States in working out the problems of international affairs—namely security of the United States, the peace of the world and the maintenance of order through law," Austin declared.

"These over-all objectives will have to be implemented with a definite foreign policy, and I feel that the Republican Party can get together on these implementations."

Senator Vandenberg, who has come to be regarded as a middle-of-the-road Republican on foreign policy questions, said he had no doubt that the postwar committee can agree on "a definite, concrete foreign policy." He declined, however, to speculate as to the nature of such a declaration.

Taft Predicts Accord

Senator Taft, who is inclined to go a little further than Vandenberg in making reservations on American participation in postwar collective action, predicted a general agreement on both foreign and domestic policies "without going into details."

"I believe it is entirely possible for the different views of the Republican Party to be reconciled," he said. "We are very much closer together than we ever have been before."

The Ohio Senator expressed belief the postwar advisory committee has another major job to do in the preparation of detailed information for the platform and other committee's use at the next party convention. He said there appears no disposition to attempt to write platform planks in advance, except as a statement of basic domestic and foreign policy might affect that work.

There were reports that congressional members at their preliminary session last week discussed means of offsetting published assertions that the group is predominantly "isolationist" in its views. That aspect also may arise when the gubernatorial members of the committee meet at Columbus, Ohio, during the Governors' conference there June 23-24. Congressional members said any decision on committee policies would await developments at this session.

Tomorrow's Tax Installment Is Last Before Payroll 'Pinch'

By the Associated Press

The second quarterly installment payment on 1942 income taxes is due tomorrow.

This will be the last such quarterly payment made by most taxpayers. Beginning July 1 the majority will pay their income and victory taxes through withholdings from wages or salaries.

The installment due tomorrow, and that paid March 15 will be applied to either 1942 or 1943 taxes, depending upon the "abatement year" of each taxpayer.

The "abatement year" is either 1942 or 1943, which ever represents a person's smaller tax payment. If 1942 is your abatement year, and your tax for it is $100. $75 of the amount (75 per cent) will be abated under the pay-as-you-go tax bill. You will owe the remaining $25 in equal installments, due March 15, 1944, and March 15, 1945. You also will owe your full 1943 tax, and the installments paid March 15 and tomorrow will apply toward this obligation, as will the withholdings from your pay between July 1 and December 31.

The same 75 per cent formula applies to all whose "abatement year" taxes total more than $50. Those with bills of $50 or less receive 100 per cent "forgiveness" for that year. Those with tax bills between $50 and $66.75 receive $50 abatement and will owe the remaining amount in 1944 and 1945 installments.

The withholding applies only to persons receiving wages or salaries. Such taxpayers as professional men, receiving fees or other income, will pay their taxes currently on a quarterly basis.

While the quarterly payment will be abolished for most taxpayers, the annual March 15 returns are not done away with. Every taxpayer must file a return next March 15, remitting whatever he may owe the Government despite his two quarterly payments this year and the July 1-December 31 withholding. If all these total more than his tax obligation, he will receive a rebate.

Simplification of 1000 Items Planned by WPB to Aid Output

By Edwin D. Gritz

Post Staff Writer

About 1000 civilian items have been selected for drastic simplification under a WPB program designed to augment the total productive capacity of the Nation's war machines by 10 to 20 per cent this year, it was disclosed yesterday in an OWI survey of civilian economy.

The report stressed, however, that no serious eliminations of civilian goods are contemplated.

Of the 1000 items under consideration, at least 50 per cent were said to be of household importance. Last year, only 40 per cent of 200 items affected by simplification were for household use.

Typical Savings Shown

The importance of simplification to the Nation's war effort was shown in a summary of savings already affected. Typical savings were:

Steel, 600,000 tons; copper, 17,000 tons; solder, 35,000 pounds; cloth, 180 million yards; pulp, 227,000 tons; lumber, 450 million board feet; tungsten, 8000 pounds.

By eliminating 75 per cent of the variety in manufacturers' output, the report added, not only was production increased substantially in bottleneck industries, but also an estimated 15 million man hours were released for work on war items.

The report stated that by the end of 1943 it is expected that all possible simplifications which could make a major contribution to the war program will be substantially completed.

Howard Coonley, director of the Simplification Branch of WPB's Conservation Division, was quoted as saying that the 1943 simplification program will save thousands of carloads of transportation space, millions of square feet of factory warehouse space, and will greatly add to the country's stock pile of raw materials by reducing inventory requirements some 25 per cent.

Savings on steel alone, it was pointed out, will accomplish the equivalent of building new furnaces to produce some five millions tons of steel.

Before the war, the report cited, a householder had 3500 types of electric light bulbs in 32 different voltages and 14 different colors to chose from. Today, simplification has limited choice to 1700 types.

This simplification alone was responsible for the saving of 8000 pounds of tungsten. In addition, it made available about 325,000 square feet of floor space which was turned over to the production of radio tubes for military use.

Other Simplifications

Other examples of simplification already accomplished in household items were listed as:

Wood furniture—reduced to 24 basic patterns as of July 1.

Ice boxes—limited to two models with an ice capacity of either 50 or 75 pounds and food space of 3 1-2 or 5 cubic feet.

Blankets—limited in length to 84 inches and in width to 72 inches, except for white cotton sheet blankets which are limited to 95 inches in length.

Radio tubes—Just about half the former types now produced, from 710 to 349.

Cooking stoves—limited to one type with cover tops and lids without iron and steel.

Toilet tissue—Must be shipped collapsed and with a minimum of 650 sheets to the roll. Roll styles, now 7, formerly 25.

Hammers—From 180 peacetime styles to 46.

Axes—From 382 to 45.

Hatchets—From 62 to 13.

The savings accomplished by simplifications in home equipment alone, the report said, included almost 70,000 tons of iron and steel and more than 80,000 tons of paper stock.

Paper Demands Piccadilly Be Rid Of Streetwalkers

London, June 13 (AP).—The Sunday Times demanded editorially today that police clear London's Piccadilly area of streetwalkers.

The demand was presented after a series of articles reporting an increased venereal disease rate among American troops in England was printed in the Stars and Stripes, United States Army newspaper.

"We have received complaints of the flaunting of vice in that part of London," the Sunday Times said. "It is not to be tolerated. The least we demand is that the central streets be cleared of the offense of soliciting.

"The women concerned presumably are registered. They ought to be engaged in useful work. Why should theirs be treated as a reserved occupation? . . . While compulsory powers are used against women already usefully employed, these unfortunates of the streets should not be left to spread a plague.

"If their life makes them unsuited for ordinary work, they ought to be provided with some form of employment suited to them."

4 Marine Fliers Bag 6 Zeros, Vanquish 34 Other Jap Planes

A "4 against 40" air battle in which four Marine fliers shot down six Zeros, and forced at least 18 other enemy fighter planes and 16 Japanese bombers to retreat was disclosed yesterday by the Navy.

The battle, fought in the Solomons just north of Guadalcanal on April 25, previously had been mentioned only as another of the series of air fights in that area.

Flying Corsair fighters, the Marine pilots deliberately carried the fight to the Japanese who apparently were bound on a raiding mission over American positions in the Solomons.

Let by Maj. M. K. Peyton, of Cannel City, Ky., the Navy reported, the four Corsair pilots climbed to the enemy's altitude when they sighted the Japanese while returning from strafing th enemy on Kolombangara.

They took advantage of cloud cover, until the moment they dived on the Japanese flight. The bombers immediately fled, but the Zeros dropped their belly tanks and swarmed at the Corsairs.

Lieut. L. L. Eckart, Chicago, pulled out of formation to get a shot at one of the enemy. He missed, was jumped by Zeros and was lost.

First Lieut. T. Milton Peck, Vicksburg, Miss., pulled up the nose of his plane, fired, and a Zero went down. "His own plane stalled," the Navy related. "He dived to regain speed, and pulled out with a Zero on his tail—riding him down. Lieutenant Peck dived again, to 100 feet over the water, finally outmaneuvered and lost his attacker."

Meantime he had lost sight of the battle and, assuming it was over, returned to his base.

But the fight was continuing. "The other Zeros and the two remaining Corsairs met headon. Major Peyton and Second Lieutenant Vedder (Milton Vedder, Los Angeles) were scissoring on each other for mutual protection. On his first weave over Second Lieutenant Vedder, Major Peyton got a point-blank shot at a Zero blasting it out of the air. He continued to weave, and quickly added two more Zeros. . . .

"Vedder, on his second weave over Major Peyton, picked a Zero off Peyton's tail. It disintegrated. Then a Zero hopped his tail at close range. Second Lieutenant Vedder was wounded and his plane shot up."

But both kept after the bombers. Other Zeros intercepted. Vedder shot down another but lost an aileron on his plane. He headed for the sea, bailed out at 300 feet and rode his rubber boat until rescued by a patrol bomber the next day.

Peyton, meantime, took a look at the retreating Japs and turned south. His plane had 78 machine-gun and cannon shell holes in it, both wing tanks had been shot through; Peyton was wounded.

Bombs Can Beat Japan, Declares Plane Designer

Hollywood June 13 (AP).—Maj. Alexander P. De Seversky, airplane designer and advocate of increased air power, declared during a radio forum broadcast today that "Japan can be bombed into submission just as Pantalleria was."

He compared Japan to a fortress, surrounded by a moat, and said that to attempt to breach the defenses by land and sea without strong air power "would be far too costly in life, time and substance."

"As long as we fight along a surface strategy, with the weapons of land and sea, time is on the side of Japan" said Major De Seversky. "But as soon as we decide to fight along the strategy of air power then time is on our side."

Chinese Advance, Retake Shungtze

Chungking, June 13 (AP).—Chinese troops stormed through streets strewn with Japanese corpses Friday to capture the Yangtze port of Shungtze, down river from the advanced enemy base at Ichang, the Chinese high command said tonight in a communique.

Shungtze lies between Ichang and Shasi. Before it fell, other Japanese points were captured.

First Americans, Then British Bomb Base at Mandalay

New Delhi, June 13 (AP).—United States and British bomber squadrons, the latter using newly acquired B-24 Liberators, raided the key central Burma city of Mandalay by day and night yesterday to disrupt Japanese communications and installations.

The Americans struck at daylight, dumping more than 10 tons of bombs on railway facilities in Mandalay and the suburbs of Sagaing, across the Irrawaddy River. Two boats were sunk and a third was left sinking. Rolling stock and tracks also were destroyed.

Smoke still was rising when the British, flying the American-built Liberators instead of their Blenheims, added their bomb weight during the night. The R. A. F. dropped several tons of bombs on railway yards, starting a series of explosions and a large fire. No planes were lost.

Nats Win, 16-5, Then Bow to Bosox, 7 to 0, Gain Game as A's Beat Yanks Twice, 5-3, 3-2

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Boston, June 13.—Wanna listen to Lefty Gomez shoot the breeze? "It was like this. I'm out there pitching for the Yanks in the 1936 World Series against the Giants, and I'm in plenty of trouble with runners on second and third and nobody out, and Tony Lazzeri calls "time."

POVICH

"I got three balls on the batter and no strikes, and when the crowd sees Lazzeri interrupt everything to walk over and talk to me, naturally they figure that Tony is doing the smart thing, telling me what to pitch to this guy that's got me in the hole.

"Tony is talking with his hands and I guess the crowd thinks he's a great guy, taking charge in a spot like this. But they should have heard what he was saying to me.

"He says to me, 'Hey, Lefty, this is a heluva mess, ain't it, nobody out and all these guys on base?'

"I said yes, it was a pretty tough spot, all right, and Tony still stood there, rubbing the ball up for me.

"'You're right,' he said, 'you got yourself into this mess, now get yourself out of it,' and he threw me the ball and went back to his position.

"I read in the papers the next day how Lazzeri was such a big help to me in that inning when the Giants had me on the ropes."

"When I first joined the Yankees, everybody was telling me what a great pitcher Herb Pennock was, and I got an awful shock when I first saw him. He was throwing up a lot of junk. He couldn't throw his fast ball through an open window if there was a decent wind blowing against him.

"We came up North through Georgia and the Carolinas, and in the exhibition games, that Pennock couldn't get anybody out, with that stuff he was throwing.

"I says to myself, 'Holy Gee, if that guy can win 20 games a season with that kind of pitching, I'll win 40 in this league with hard stuff.'

"They never told me that Pennock didn't take these pre-season games seriously, so the guy was never a great pitcher as far as I was concerned. He'd go in there for the first three innings and get clouted for a half-dozen runs, and I'd pitch the next three and strike out six batters.

"Well, when the season opened, they sent Pennock out there to pitch against the Athletics. All he did was shut 'em out with two hits. A few weeks later, the Yankees sent me back to St. Paul for more seasoning."

"Babe Ruth had one superstition. He wouldn't play a game unless he gave himself a treatment with some pet eye lotion he always had in his locker. I think they called it 'Eyo-Lo' or something like that, and the Babe kept the company in business.

"One day Tony Lazzeri stole that 'Eye-Lo' bottle out of Ruth's locker, dumped the stuff down the sink, and refilled the bottle full of plain drinking water. When Ruth got ready to use it, there was hell to pay.

"He started putting the stuff into his eyes with an eye-cup, and you know how plain water can smart in your eyes. Well, the Babe let out a scream.

"Lazzeri asked him what the matter was, and Babe said his Eye-Lo had fermented, or something. Tony took the bottle, dropped some of the stuff in his palm, and calmly tasted it with his tongue.

"'Don't do that, you'll poison yourself,' screamed Ruth, whereupon Tony said it didn't taste bad and put the bottle to his mouth and drained all of it. All the time, Ruth was yelling 'You're crazy!' He never did know Tony was drinking drinking water."

"I forget what year it was that Babe had the bet with Wiley Moore that Moore wouldn't get ten hits during the whole season. It wasn't a bad bet, even if Moore was a worse hitter than I was. Babe laid him $200 to $50 he wouldn't get ten hits.

"It was in the last month of the season, and Moore looked like he might win. He had nine hits, and in St. Louis one day, he hit a grounder down to the shortstop. The shortstop made a good play, and a good throw, and Moore was out by three steps, but the umpire had a brainstorm and called him safe.

"That meant the official scorer had to credit Moore with a hit. But that didn't stop the Babe. He charged out of the Yankee dugout and tried to argue that umpire into calling Moore, a Yankee player, out. Ruth put up a great argument to get the umpire to reverse his decision, but it was no dice, and he had to pay off."

"They had me in a spot a few years ago when I finally decided to live in Lexington, Mass. I was supposed to speak at a Chamber of Commerce meeting, and it turned out to be a big rally for Wendell Willkie who was running against Roosevelt for President.

"When they asked me to talk, I was in the middle, because I knew the whole town was rock-bound Republican, and any ball player is stupid if he takes sides in a political race.

"So I finally told 'em, 'Ladies and gentlemen, since Roosevelt was President, the Yankees have won four straight pennants and I got cuts out of four World Series. If Willkie will guarantee me the same program, I'll vote for him.'"

Tyack's Hits Win Second For Wolff

Russ Christopher, Fagan Hold Yanks In Opener; Gordon's Error Helps A's

By International News Service

Philadelphia, June 13.—The Athletics rallied in both games today to knock over the New York Yankees in a double-header, 5 to 3 and 3 to 2. Philadelphia got four-hit pitching from Russ Christopher and Everett Fagan in the first game and a seven-hit job from Roger Wolff in the second.

Mental errors helped New York to a 3-1 lead in the opener but a boot by Joe Gordon enabled the A's to tie the score in the seventh frame. In the eighth singles by Pete Suder, Irv Hall and Jo Jo White produced one run and a wild throw by Johnny Murphy admitted another.

Jim Tyack drove home all three of the Mack's scores in the second game, hitting a two-run triple in the first inning and singling White home with the winning tally in the eighth. The Yanks scored twice in the second inning on a walk and successive singles by Nick Etten, Rollie Hemsley and Bill Johnson.

A's Squeeze Play Crosses Yankees for Winning Run

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

New York catcher Ken Sears lunges after a wild pitch by Johnny Murphy in the eighth inning of the first game yesterday after JoJo White caught the Yanks flat-footed on a perfect squeeze play. Pete Suder is sliding safely home on the play and Irving Hall followed on Murphy's error. The A's won both ends of a double-header.

Braves Split Double-Header With Dodgers

Brooklyn, June 13.—The Brooklyn Dodgers had to battle to keep from dropping a double-header to the Boston Braves today, but managed to snare a 3 to 2 victory in the second game after losing the opener 4 to 3.

The authority for the triumph in the nightcap was provided by Billy Herman with an eighth-inning home hun off George Jeffcoat after Paul Waner had singled.

Previously the Dodgers had counted a run in the seventh to break a scoreless pitching duel between Jim Tobin and Bobo Newsom. Tobin was removed for a pinch runner after starting a two-run rally in the top of the eighth with a single. Eddie Joost doubled and John McCarthy singled for the runs. The Braves tried another rally in the ninth but Kirby Higbe, relieving Newsom with two on and none out, halted the threat.

In the first game the Braves scored twice in the first on a walk, a triple by McCarthy and a wild throw by Augie Galan and collected two more runs in the seventh on two singles and a double by Pitcher Nate Andrews to send Whit Wyatt to defeat.

Andrews gave up nine hits, two more than the Braves made, but was steady and overcame poor fielding support. Two consecutive fumbles by Connie Ryan in the third helped the Dodgers tie the score and they added another tally in the eighth.

Bucs Beat Cards, 10-3, 2nd Called, 4-4 in 12th

By International News Service

St. Louis, June 13.—The Pittsburgh Pirates won a 10-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of a double bill today then battled to a 4-4, 12-inning tie in the nightcap. The second game was halted because of darkness.

Trailing 4 to 2 going into the seventh inning of the second game, the Pirates gained a tie when Elbie Fletcher homered with one on base.

The Priates pounded Harry Brecheen and Harry Gumbert for seven runs in the first inning of the first game. Later they added three more as the Cards scored two in the first and one in the eighth.

Doubles by Gustine and O'Brien launched the Pirates' savage attack and with two runs in and the bases loaded, Gumbert relieved Brecheen. Two walks and singles by Gustine and O'Brien the next time up finished Gumbert. Murry Dickson then came into the box and completed the game.

Wally Hebert scored his fourth win for the Pirates, giving the Cards 11 hits.

Earl Brown Named Dartmouth Grid And Court Coach

By International News Service

Hanover, N. H., June 13.—Dartmouth's new head football coach for the 1943 season will be Earl M. Brown, Harvard end coach, Director of Athletics William H. McCarter announced today.

The Big Green's new gridiron leader will also take over the vacant post of varsity basketball coach.

Selection of Brown from a sizable list of candidates fills the football vacancy created here when coach "Tuss" McLaughry enlisted in the Marine Corps.

Coach Brown, a native of Benton Harbor, Mich., first came into the gridiron limelight at Notre Dame, where he starred in both football and basketball for three seasons before graduating in 1939.

Washington Club Goes on Batting Spree in Opener; Gets 18 Safeties

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Boston, June 13.—Speaking of duel personalities, you should have seen the Nats today. Early this afternoon they were a rip-snorting, 18-hit gang who slapped down the Red Sox, 16 to 5. Late this afternoon they went into such a feeble act they were licked, 7-0, in the second game of a double-header.

The Nats couldn't stir up more than four hits in that second game against big Tex Hughson, a fellow with a pretty good past in this series, Hughson licked the Nats earlier in the week.

Today's events were far from a total loss for the Nats, though. Despite their second-game miseries, they narrowed the Yankees' league to a mere two games, thanks to the Yanks' pair of lickings at Philadelphia.

The 18,928 customers who saw the Nats pour it on four Boston pitchers in the first game, took high satisfaction from what happened in the second as Hughson took complete charge of the Washington athletes.

For seven innings, the only hits the Nats owned against Hughson were the pair of singles George Case had collected in his first two times at bat. So completely discombooberated were the Nats by Hughson's wide assortment of curve balls, screw balls, sinkers and knucklers, that only two of 'em got to second base.

Actually, the Nats didn't hit their way to second base. Bob Johnson got there in the second inning on a walk and a steal, and Johnny Sullivan pulled up at second on a single and an error.

Mertz Steadies

Alex Carrasquel was the losing pitcher in the second game. He gave up two runs in the first inning and was eventually batted out in the seventh when Bobby Doerr banged a home run over the left field wall, but Carrasquel's position was hopeless from the out-

Tigers Annex Two From Chicago Sox

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 13.—The Detroit Tigers seized sole possession of the American League's third place today by taking both ends of a double-header from the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 4 and 3 to 2, before 28,197 spectators, sceond largest 1943 crowd at Briggs Stadim.

The twin triumph gave Detroit a 3 to 2 series edge to end Chicago's string of successes achieved in the East.

"Your Mark of Style"

In the opener the Tigers backed up ancient Tommy Bridges with a ten-hit attack off Bill Dietrich and Jake Wade. Ned Harris belted a 2-run homer in the first, and Rookie Joe Hoover doubled home what proved to be the winning run in the fourth. The Sox clustered five hits for their four runs in the second.

In the nightcap, Virgil Trucks scattered seven Chicago hits but needed ninth-inning help from Hal Newhouser to gain his sixth victory. Lefty Edgar Smith yielded five safeties, notably two doubles by Rudy York and one by Pinky Higgins that each drove in a run.

Bridges gained his fourth victory, and Dietrich and Smith each suffered their fourth defeat.

Marjorie Van Ryn Defeats Ann Gray in Women's Net Final

Later Teams With Mrs. Wilmer Allison To Capture Title In Doubles Event

Marjorie Van Ryn, wife of Naval Lieut. John Van Ryn, former Davis Cup doubles partner of Wilmer Allison, won the 1943 City of Washington women's singles tennis championship on the Rock Creek courts yesterday, and then came back later in the day to team with Mrs. Wilmer Allison to capture the tourney doubles crown. Although on the distaff side, it read like turning back the clock a decade on American tennis with the names Van Ryn and Allison again linked in a winning combination.

The men's doubles championship went to Davey Johnsen and Hugh Lynch, who outstroked Lieuts. Dick Murphy and Burke Wilkinson of the Navy, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2.

Mrs. Van Ryn, who holds the women's singles championship of Texas, ousted defending titlist Ann Gray in straight sets, 6—1, 6—3, to win the title. This made the second time she has beaten Mrs. Gray for a title, having won the District Open championship from the petite blonde last fall.

Yesterday both women suffered the handicap of a terrifically hot day, and both left the baked courts well winded. The match was conceded to be an even-steven affair, but the new champion exceeded the vaunted steadiness of Mrs. Gray, and was hitting harder and more accurate shots throughout the two sets. Mrs. Gray was somewhat off form in the titular match, having frequent trouble with her service and committing a number of point-losing foot faults.

In the women's doubles, Mrs. Gray and Ena Dellinger were scheduled to meet Mrs. T. J. Hohenthal and Mrs. Julie Fisher for a championship shot at the Van Ryn—Allison combine. However, Miss Dellinger was stricken with appendicitis yesterday afternoon and rushed to a hospital.

This paved the way into the finals, by default, for the Hohenthal-Fisher team, which was beaten by Mrs. Van Ryan and Allison, 6—0, 6—3. This match followed the pattern prescribed by the pretournament dope, and was played under considerably cooler weather conditions than the singles, finishing just ahead of a rain squall.

The man's doubles championship also followed the prescribed pattern, in that the favorites won, Johnsen and Lynch turning back Lieutenants Murphy and Wilkinson, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2.

The initial set was played under a broiling sun, and was tied up twice during the dozen games at 4-all and 5-all. Then Johnsen and Lynch took the two final games to win the set, 7—5.

Although the champions built up a slight lead at the start of the second set, the Navy overtook them, mainly on the strength of the stocky Murphy's steadier play, and at one time held a 4-2 advantage.

In the final set, Johnsen and Lynch forged into an early lead and were never headed.

The remaining players in the singles are advised to call the court pro, Harry Brinkerhoff, at Columbia 7400 in advance to determine whether their matches will be affected by the weather.—OSCAR ELDER.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS
Women's Singles
Championship match—Mrs. John Van Ryn defeated Mrs. Ann Gray, 6—1, 6—3.
Women's Doubles
Semifinals—Ena Dellinger and Mrs. Ann Gray defaulted to Mrs. T. J. Hohenthal and Mrs. Julie Fiske.
Championship match—Mrs. John Van Ryn and Mrs. Wilmer Allison defeated Mrs. T. J. Hohenthal and Mrs. Julie Fiske, 6—0, 6—3.
Men's Doubles
Championship match—Davey Johnsen and Hugh Lynch defeated Lieuts. Dick Murphy and Burke Wilkinson, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2.

Joe Comer, G. W. Star, Dies in Plane Crash

Captain of 1941 Basketball Team Killed In California; Was Lieutenant in Air Corps

Lieut. Joseph Comer, captain of one of George Washington University's greatest basketball teams, the 1940-41 combination, was killed in a plane crash in California, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Comer, were notified yesterday.

No details were made public.

Lieutenant Comer, a member of the U. S. Air Corps for the past 18 months, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Vivian Smith Comer in addition to his parents. His wife, an expectant mother, was told of the tragedy yesterday while visiting with relatives on a farm near Damascus, Md. Mrs. Comer is a graduate of Wilson Teachers College.

Lieutenant Comer is the first prominent athlete of G. W. U. to be killed in the present war. His death is also the first of the 125 members of the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church parish in the services.

A regular on the Roosevelt High basketball team before entering George Washington, Comer played on the G. W. frosh his first year in college and was a reserve his second season. In his junior year Comer took over the regular center post, playing the full season, and was captain of a team which won 18 and lost 4 in his senior year as he developed as an outstanding player.

Lieutenant Comer also pitched on the Colonial baseball team.

He was a native Washingtonian.

Hanbury Signs For Fight Here On June 28

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty Athletic Club last night said that Lew Hanbury, local lightweight and Navy Yard worker, has agreed to meet one of three outstanding boxers at Griffith Stadium on Monday night, June 28.

Cloe Shans, formerly a colored protege of Henry Armstrong and a good lightweight; Jackie Wilson, former world's featherweight boxing champion and knockout conqueror of Danny Petre, and Richie Lemos, picturesque Pacific Coast Mexican and former claimant of the world's featherweight title, all are under consideration.

Ahearn has offered a $3000 flat guarantee with a privelege of 25 per cent for Wilson's services, but last night felt that he had a better chance of singing Shans than any of the above mentioned trio.

Shans, who employs a whirlwind similar to that of Armstrong, has met and defeated some of the best. In one of his last fights he defeated Jackie Callura, N. B. A. featherweight champion, who more recently was upset by Hanbury here.

Selections at Charles Town

The long meeting here enters the final stages with today's program. Business hasn't been any too good, but the mere fact that they have a chance to keep their horses in action is music to the horsemen. Owner H. E. Statler got in an argument about one of his horses and decided to work out the plater himself. The horse ducked into a gap, fell and dragged Statler, who suffered multiple bruises and three cracked ribs. Pat Poluch of Hagerstown has a new six-and-a-half-pound baby girl; the fourth child for the popular owner-trainer. A. A. Fishback has shipped Seven Seas, winner here, back to the farm because of lameness. Trainer-Owner H. M. Simpson's mother passed away in Washington. She was 94. The Eastview Stable sold Laugh and Play to L. S. Stewart of Washington. W. E. Jones will ship six horses to Garden State Park. Johnny Bringhurst is slated to be the outrider at the Hagerstown meeting. Capt. Edward Barrett has assigned Inmate to John Hartnett for training. The horse Ringmond bowed and will be on the shelf for some time. Apprentice R. Fitzgerald passed up Saturday's racing to visit his home at Lancaster, Pa. Harry Triggis is making riding engagements for Apprentice Vince Bracciale and Jockey George Witmer. Today's sixth race should be a sizzler with Saran tackling Silver Beam and Heloria, recent winners. See you on the rail . . . BILL.

First race—SATIN MARIE has speed and seems suited by this abbreviated sprint. MISTAKE will be dangerous if he gets off well. REVELRY is a doubtful starter but will be close if in action.

Second race—SUG ran a good last out and may take it all in this field. AMPLIFY and MEADOW SON to take care of the place and show awards.

Third race—MISS ANACONDA closed like the wind in a short sprint and appears ready for this distance. ROSTAN won here and is a threat. HAPPY SIS for the minor money.

Fourth race—MIGHTY BUSY and SINGING STEEL are a tight fit in this field and I'll take them in the order named. TROSTAR belongs in the first flight in this company.

Fifth race—PITTSBURGH is the speed in this gang and belongs on top. DISCRETION is the one to whip. HARD LOSER is good now and will be a factor.

Sixth race—The Strother entry of SARAN and TWO TIMER should click in this field. BALLACON has worked well and could be a surprise. SILVER BEAM is fit and is dangerous.

Seventh race—LENA GIRL galloped in her first outing of the year and may make it two in a row. EVENING SHOT won in heavy going and will be right there. REMOLEE for the show end.

Eighth race—HOT MAN is in rare form and will take it all. TIME PLAY and SOME GROUCHER to fill out the cash circle.

Best bet—PITTSBURGH.

Nats Win, 16-5, Then Bow to Bosox, 7 to 0, Gain Game as A's Beat Yanks Twice, 5-3, 3-2

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Boston, June 13.—Wanna listen to Lefty Gomez shoot the breeze?

"It was like this. I'm out there pitching for the Yanks in the 1936 World Series against the Giants, and I'm in plenty of trouble with runners on second and third and nobody out, and Tony Lazzeri calls "time."

POVICH

"I got three balls on the batter and no strikes, and when the crowd sees Lazzeri interrupt everything to walk over and talk to me, naturally they figure that Tony is doing the smart thing, telling me what to pitch to this guy that's got me in the hole.

"Tony is talking with his hands and I guess the crowd thinks he's a great guy, taking charge in a spot like this. But they should have heard what he was saying to me.

"He says to me, 'Hey, Lefty, this is a heluva mess, ain't it, nobody out and all these guys on base?'

"I said yes, it was a pretty tough spot, all right, and Tony still stood there, rubbing the ball up for me.

"'You're right,' he said, 'you got yourself into this mess, now get yourself out of it,' and he threw me the ball and went back to his position.

"I read in the papers the next day how Lazzeri was such a big help to me in that inning when the Giants had me on the ropes."

"When I first joined the Yankees, everybody was telling me what a great pitcher Herb Pennock was, and I got an awful shock when I first saw him. He was throwing up a lot of junk. He couldn't throw his fast ball through an open window if there was a decent wind blowing against him.

"We came up North through Georgia and the Carolinas, and in the exhibition games, that Pennock couldn't get anybody out, with that stuff he was throwing.

"I says to myself, 'Holy Gee, if that guy can win 20 games a season with that kind of pitching, I'll win 40 in this league with hard stuff.'

"They never told me that Pennock didn't take these pre-season games seriously, so the guy was never a great pitcher as far as I was concerned. He'd go in there for the first three innings and get clouted for a half-dozen runs, and I'd pitch the next three and strike out six batters.

"Well, when the season opened, they sent Pennock out there to pitch against the Athletics. All he did was shut 'em out with two hits. A few weeks later, the Yankees sent me back to St. Paul for more seasoning."

"Babe Ruth had one superstition. He wouldn't play a game unless he gave himself a treatment with some pet eye lotion he always had in his locker. I think they called it 'Eyo-Lo' or something like that, and the Babe kept the company in business.

"One day Tony Lazzeri stole that 'Eye-Lo' bottle out of Ruth's locker, dumped the stuff down the sink, and refilled the bottle full of plain drinking water. When Ruth got ready to use it, there was hell to pay.

"He started putting the stuff into his eyes with an eye-cup, and you know how plain water can smart in your eyes. Well, the Babe let out a scream.

"Lazzeri asked him what the matter was, and Babe said his Eye-Lo had fermented, or something. Tony took the bottle, dropped some of the stuff in his palm, and calmly tasted it with his tongue.

"'Don't do that, you'll poison yourself,' screamed Ruth, whereupon Tony said it didn't taste bad and put the bottle to his mouth and drained all of it. All the time, Ruth was yelling 'You're crazy!' He never did know Tony was drinking drinking water."

"I forget what year it was that Babe had the bet with Wiley Moore that Moore wouldn't get ten hits during the whole season. It wasn't a bad bet, even if Moore was a worse hitter than I was. Babe laid him $200 to $50 he wouldn't get ten hits.

"It was in the last month of the season, and Moore looked like he might win. He had nine hits, and in St. Louis one day, he hit a grounder down to the shortstop. The shortstop made a good play, and a good throw, and Moore was out by three steps, but the umpire had a brainstorm and called him safe.

"That meant the official scorer had to credit Moore with a hit. But that didn't stop the Babe. He charged out of the Yankee dugout and tried to argue that umpire into calling Moore, a Yankee player, out. Ruth put up a great argument to get the umpire to reverse his decision, but it was no dice, and he had to pay off."

"They had me in a spot a few years ago when I finally decided to live in Lexington, Mass. I was supposed to speak at a Chamber of Commerce meeting, and it turned out to be a big rally for Wendell Willkie who was running against Roosevelt for President.

"When they asked me to talk, I was in the middle, because I knew the whole town was rock-bound Republican, and any ball player is stupid if he takes sides in a political race.

"So I finally told 'em, 'Ladies and gentlemen, since Roosevelt was President, the Yankees have won four straight pennants and I got cuts out of four World Series. If Willkie will guarantee me the same program, I'll vote for him.'"

Tyack's Hits Win Second For Wolff

Russ Christopher, Fagan Hold Yanks In Opener; Gordon's Error Helps A's

By International News Service

Philadelphia, June 13.—The Athletics rallied in both games today to knock over the New York Yankees in a double-header, 5 to 3 and 3 to 2. Philadelphia got four-hit pitching from Russ Christopher and Everett Fagan in the first game and a seven-hit job from Roger Wolff in the second.

Mental errors helped New York to a 3-1 lead in the opener but a boot by Joe Gordon enabled the A's to tie the score in the seventh frame. In the eighth singles by Pete Suder, Irv Hall and Jo Jo White produced one run and a wild throw by Johnny Murphy admitted another.

Jim Tyack drove home all three of the Mack's scores in the second game, hitting a two-run triple in the first inning and singling White home with the winning tally in the eighth. The Yanks scored twice in the second inning on a walk and successive singles by Nick Etten, Rollie Hemsley and Bill Johnson.

A's Squeeze Play Crosses Yankees for Winning Run

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

New York catcher Ken Sears lunges after a wild pitch by Johnny Murphy in the eighth inning of the first game yesterday after JoJo White caught the Yanks flat-footed on a perfect squeeze play. Pete Suder is sliding safely home on the play and Irving Hall followed on Murphy's error. The A's won both ends of a double-header.

Braves Split Double-Header With Dodgers

Brooklyn, June 13.—The Brooklyn Dodgers had to battle to keep from dropping a double-header to the Boston Braves today, but managed to snare a 3 to 2 victory in the second game after losing the opener 4 to 3.

The authority for the triumph in the nightcap was provided by Billy Herman with an eighth-inning home hun off George Jeffcoat after Paul Waner had singled.

Previously the Dodgers had counted a run in the seventh to break a scoreless pitching duel between Jim Tobin and Bobo Newsom. Tobin was removed for a pinch runner after starting a two-run rally in the top of the eighth with a single. Eddie Joost doubled and John McCarthy singled for the runs. The Braves tried another rally in the ninth but Kirby Higbe, relieving Newsom with two on and none out, halted the threat.

In the first game the Braves scored twice in the first on a walk, a triple by McCarthy and a wild throw by Augie Galan and collected two more runs in the seventh on two singles and a double by Pitcher Nate Andrews to send Whit Wyatt to defeat.

Andrews gave up nine hits, two more than the Braves made, but was steady and overcame poor fielding support. Two consecutive fumbles by Connie Ryan in the third helped the Dodgers tie the score and they added another tally in the eighth.

Bucs Beat Cards, 10-3, 2nd Called, 4-4 in 12th

By International News Service

St. Louis, June 13.—The Pittsburgh Pirates won a 10-to-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the first game of a double bill today then battled to a 4-4, 12-inning tie in the nightcap. The second game was halted because of darkness.

Trailing 4 to 2 going into the seventh inning of the second game, the Pirates gained a tie when Elbie Fletcher homered with one on base.

The Pirates pounded Harry Brecheen and Harry Gumbert for seven runs in the first inning of the first game. Later they added three more as the Cards scored two in the first and one in the eighth.

Doubles by Gustine and O'Brien launched the Pirates' savage attack and with two runs in and the bases loaded, Gumbert relieved Brecheen. Two walks and singles by Gustine and O'Brien the next time up finished Gumbert. Murry Dickson then came into the box and completed the game.

Wally Hebert scored his fourth win for the Pirates, giving the Cards 11 hits.

Earl Brown Named Dartmouth Grid And Court Coach

By International News Service

Hanover, N. H., June 13.—Dartmouth's new head football coach for the 1943 season will be Earl M. Brown, Harvard end coach, Director of Athletics William H. McCarter announced today.

The Big Green's new gridiron leader will also take over the vacant post of varsity basketball coach.

Selection of Brown from a sizable list of candidates fills the football vacancy created here when coach "Tuss" McLaughry enlisted in the Marine Corps.

Coach Brown, a native of Benton Harbor, Mich., first came into the gridiron limelight at Notre Dame, where he starred in both football and basketball for three seasons before graduating in 1939.

Washington Club Goes on Batting Spree in Opener; Gets 18 Safeties

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Boston, June 13.—Speaking of duel personalities, you should have seen the Nats today. Early this afternoon they were a rip-snorting, 18-hit gang who slapped down the Red Sox, 16 to 5. Late this afternoon they went into such a feeble act they were licked, 7-0, in the second game of a double-header.

The Nats couldn't stir up more than four hits in that second game against big Tex Hughson, a fellow with a pretty good past in this series, Hughson licked the Nats earlier in the week.

Today's events were far from a total loss for the Nats, though. Despite their second-game miseries, they narrowed the Yankees' league to a mere two games, thanks to the Yanks' pair of lickings at Philadelphia.

The 18,928 customers who saw the Nats pour it on four Boston pitchers in the first game, took high satisfaction from what happened in the second as Hughson took complete charge of the Washington athletes.

For seven innings, the only hits the Nats owned against Hughson were the pair of singles George Case had collected in his first two times at bat. So completely discombobulated were the Nats by Hughson's wide assortment of curve balls, screw balls, sinkers and knucklers, that only two of 'em got to second base.

Actually, the Nats didn't hit their way to second base. Bob Johnson got there in the second inning on a walk and a steal, and Johnny Sullivan pulled up at second on a single and an error.

Alex Carrasquel was the losing pitcher in the second game. He gave up two runs in the first inning and was eventually batted out in the seventh when Bobby Doerr banged a home run over the left field wall, but Carrasquel's position was hopeless from the out-

Tigers Annex Two From Chicago Sox

By the Associated Press

Detroit, June 13.—The Detroit Tigers seized sole possession of the American League's third place today by taking both ends of a double-header from the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 4 and 3 to 2, before 28,197 spectators, sceond largest 1943 crowd at Briggs Stadim.

The twin triumph gave Detroit a 3 to 2 series edge to end Chicago's string of successes achieved in the East.

In the opener the Tigers backed up ancient Tommy Bridges with a ten-hit attack off Bill Dietrich and Jake Wade. Ned Harris belted a 2-run homer in the first, and Rookie Joe Hoover doubled home what proved to be the winning run in the fourth. The Sox clustered five hits for their four runs in the second.

In the nightcap, Virgil Trucks scattered seven Chicago hits but needed ninth-inning help from Hal Newhouser to gain his sixth victory. Lefty Edgar Smith yielded five safeties, notably two doubles by Rudy York and one by Pinky Higgins that each drove in a run.

Bridges gained his fourth victory, and Dietrich and Smith each suffered their fourth defeat.

Marjorie Van Ryn Defeats Ann Gray in Women's Net Final

Later Teams With Mrs. Wilmer Allison To Capture Title In Doubles Event

Marjorie Van Ryn, wife of Naval Lieut. John Van Ryn, former Davis Cup doubles partner of Wilmer Allison, won the 1943 City of Washington women's singles tennis championship on the Rock Creek courts yesterday, and then came back later in the day to team with Mrs. Wilmer Allison to capture the tourney doubles crown. Although on the distaff side, it read like turning back the clock a decade on American tennis with the names Van Ryn and Allison again linked in a winning combination.

The men's doubles championship went to Davey Johnsen and Hugh Lynch, who outstroked Lieuts. Dick Murphy and Burke Wilkinson of the Navy, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2.

Mrs. Van Ryn, who holds the women's singles championship of Texas, ousted defending titlist Ann Gray in straight sets, 6—1, 6—3, to win the title. This made the second time she has beaten Mrs. Gray for a title, having won the District Open championship from the petite blonde last fall.

Yesterday both women suffered the handicap of a terrifically hot day, and both left the baked courts well winded. The match was conceded to be an even-steven affair, but the new champion exceeded the vaunted steadiness of Mrs. Gray, and was hitting harder and more accurate shots throughout the two sets. Mrs. Gray was somewhat off form in the titular match, having frequent trouble with her service and committing a number of point-losing foot faults.

In the women's doubles, Mrs. Gray and Ena Dellinger were scheduled to meet Mrs. T. J. Hohenthal and Mrs. Julie Fisher for a championship shot at the Van Ryn—Allison combine. However, Miss Dellinger was stricken with appendicitis yesterday afternoon and rushed to a hospital.

This paved the way into the finals, by default, for the Hohenthal-Fisher team, which was beaten by Mrs. Van Ryan and Allison, 6—0, 6—3. This match followed the pattern prescribed by the pretournament dope, and was played under considerably cooler weather conditions than the singles, finishing just ahead of a rain squall.

The man's doubles championship also followed the prescribed pattern, in that the favorites won, Johnsen and Lynch turning back Lieutenants Murphy and Wilkinson, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2.

The initial set was played under a broiling sun, and was tied up twice during the dozen games at 4-all and 5-all. Then Johnsen and Lynch took the two final games to win the set, 7—5.

Although the champions built up a slight lead at the start of the second set, the Navy overtook them, mainly on the strength of the stocky Murphy's steadier play, and at one time held a 4-2 advantage.

In the final set, Johnsen and Lynch forged into an early lead and were never headed.

The remaining players in the singles are advised to call the court pro, Harry Brinkerhoff, at Columbia 7400 in advance to determine whether their matches will be affected by the weather.—OSCAR ELDER.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS

Women's Singles

Championship match—Mrs. John Van Ryn defeated Mrs. Ann Gray, 6—1, 6—3.

Women's Doubles

Championship match—Mrs. John Van Ryn and Mrs. Wilmer Allison defeated Mrs. T. J. Hohenthal and Mrs. Julie Fiske, 6—0, 6—3.

Men's Doubles

Championship match—Davey Johnsen and Hugh Lynch defeated Lieuts. Dick Murphy and Burke Wilkinson, 7—5, 6—4, 6—2.

Joe Comer, G. W. Star, Dies in Plane Crash

Captain of 1941 Basketball Team Killed In California; Was Lieutenant in Air Corps

Lieut. Joseph Comer, captain of one of George Washington University's greatest basketball teams, the 1940-41 combination, was killed in a plane crash in California, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Comer, were notified yesterday.

No details were made public.

JOE COMER

Lieutenant Comer, a member of the U. S. Air Corps for the past 18 months, is survived by his wife, Mrs. Vivian Smith Comer in addition to his parents. His wife, an expectant mother, was told of the tragedy yesterday while visiting with relatives on a farm near Damascus, Md. Mrs. Comer is a graduate of Wilson Teachers College.

Lieutenant Comer is the first prominent athlete of G. W. U. to be killed in the present war. His death is also the first of the 125 members of the Wallace Memorial United Presbyterian Church parish in the services.

A regular on the Roosevelt High basketball team before entering George Washington, Comer played on the G. W. frosh his first year in college and was a reserve his second season. In his junior year Comer took over the regular center post, playing the full season, and was captain of a team which won 18 and lost 4 in his senior year as he developed as an outstanding player.

Lieutenant Comer also pitched on the Colonial baseball team.

He was a native Washingtonian.

Hanbury Signs For Fight Here On June 28

Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn of the Liberty Athletic Club last night said that Lew Hanbury, local lightweight and Navy Yard worker, has agreed to meet one of three outstanding boxers at Griffith Stadium on Monday night, June 28.

Cloe Shans, formerly a colored protege of Henry Armstrong and a good lightweight; Jackie Wilson, former world's featherweight boxing champion and knockout conqueror of Danny Petre, and Richie Lemos, picturesque Pacific Coast Mexican and former claimant of the world's featherweight title, all are under consideration.

Ahearn has offered a $3000 flat guarantee with a privelege of 25 per cent for Wilson's services, but last night felt that he had a better chance of singing Shans than any of the above mentioned trio.

Shans, who employs a whirlwind similar to that of Armstrong, has met and defeated some of the best. In one of his last fights he defeated Jackie Callura, N. B. A. featherweight champion, who more recently was upset by Hanbury here.

Grays Lose Opener, but Win 2d, 13-2

The Washington Homestead Grays, representing the Negro National League, divided a doubleheader with the league-leading New York Cuban Stars yesterday at Griffith Stadium, losing the initial game the hard way, 10-9, and annexing the nightcap, a 7-inning affair, 13-2.

The Grays started off the first game with runs by Bell, Benjamin and Leonard in the first inning. Leonard's triple to the right-field wall contributing to the lead. But the Cubans picked up one run in the second inning and went ahead in the third on doubles by Brooks and Linares.

Selections at Charles Town

The long meeting here enters the final stages with today's program. Business hasn't been any too good, but the mere fact that they have a chance to keep their horses in action is music to the horsemen. Owner H. E. Statler got in an argument about one of his horses and decided to work out the plater himself. The horse ducked into a gap, fell and dragged Statler, who suffered multiple bruises and three cracked ribs. Pat Poluch of Hagerstown has a new six-and-a-half-pound baby girl; the fourth child for the popular owner-trainer. A. A. Fishback has shipped Seven Seas, winner here, back to the farm because of lameness. Trainer-Owner H. M. Simpson's mother passed away in Washington. She was 94. The Eastview Stable sold Laugh and Play to L. S. Stewart of Washington. W. E. Jones will ship six horses to Garden State Park. Johnny Bringhurst is slated to be the outrider at the Hagerstown meeting. Capt. Edward Barrett has assigned Inmate to John Hartnett for training. The horse Ringmond bowed and will be on the shelf for some time. Apprentice R. Fitzgerald passed up Saturday's racing to visit his home at Lancaster, Pa. Harry Triggis is making riding engagements for Apprentice Vince Bracciale and Jockey George Witmer. Today's sixth race should be a sizzler with Saran tackling Silver Beam and Heloria, recent winners. See you on the rail . . . BILL.

First race—SATIN MARIE has speed and seems suited by this abbreviated sprint. MISTAKE will be dangerous if he gets off well. REVELRY is a doubtful starter but will be close if in action.

Second race—SUG ran a good last out and may take it all in this field. AMPLIFY and MEADOW SON to take care of the place and show awards.

Third race—MISS ANACONDA closed like the wind in a short sprint and appears ready for this distance. ROSTAN won here and is a threat. HAPPY SIS for the minor money.

Fourth race—MIGHTY BUSY and SINGING STEEL are a tight fit in this field and I'll take them in the order named. TROSTAR belongs in the first flight in this company.

Fifth race—PITTSBURGH is the speed in this gang and belongs on top. DISCRETION is the one to whip. HARD LOSER is good now and will be a factor.

Sixth race—The Strother entry of SARAN and TWO TIMER should click in this field. BALLACON has worked well and could be a surprise. SILVER BEAM is fit and is dangerous.

Seventh race—LENA GIRL galloped in her first outing of the year and may make it two in a row. EVENING SHOT won in heavy going and will be right there. REMOLEE for the show end.

Eighth race—HOT MAN is in rare form and will take it all. TIME PLAY and SOME GROUCHER to fill out the cash circle.

Best bet—PITTSBURGH.

Tom Lennon, Dudley Win Golf Events

Tom Lennon, a 14-handicap golfer, played Indian Spring's front nine in 34 strokes yesterday, 1 under par, added a 41 coming back for a 75 and after deducting his allowance won low net in the Red Cross play with a net 61.

Pro Mel Shorey reported $123 in entrance fees from the week-end tournament for a grand total of $261 toward the $2500 mobile unit the club members are purchasing for the Red Cross. The unit was on display on the first tee as an added incentive to the golfers.

Jim Huntt posted another of his frequent near-par rounds, a 37-35, 72, two over regulation figures, to win low gross winner in the women's division with a 45-46, 91. Low net among the women was won by Mrs. C. O. Jorg with a 106-30, 76.

WOODMONT

Ellis Edlowitz was a double winner at Woodmont Club with the same round of golf, using a 74-9, 65 to win the Class A section of the sweepstakes tournament and also the medal in the handicap championship.

The first match in the handicap championship, won last year by Dave Legum, must be played before Saturday, a flight of eight class A players and 16 in Class D qualified for the match play rounds.

Edlowitz, with his five-over par 74 and Major Max Felix, with a fine 72, minus a six handicap for 66, finished 1-2 in the sweepstakes.

Crucial Series With Yankees Starts Today

Boston, June 13.—The distinct novelty of a crucial series in Griffith Stadium, the first such in ten years, is scheduled to start tomorrow when the Nats return to Washington to play the league-leading Yankees.

Only two games separate the Yankees and the second-place Nats, who are enduring nicely in the role of pennant contender and picked up a full game today despite their split with the Red Sox.

Tomorrow's game ushers in a four-game series between the two top clubs, with night contests scheduled Tuesday and Wednesday, and the fourth game on Thursday.

In an attempt to get a satisfactory adjustment in the record of the 1943 season thus far, which shows that the Nats have won only two of six games with the Yanks, Manager Ossie Bluege tomorrow will start knuckle baller Dutch Leonard.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 13.—The burly young general who reviewed the pre-flight cadets of Cardinal Hayes High School today was Brig. Gen. Laverne Saunders—called Blondy when he was a great tackle for West Point in the 1920's.

CONSIDINE

There isn't much left of his hair, which used to be black, incidentally, and he told the sports writers who went up to see him that his weight now is a "soft 193." But he is still plenty of man, with two thick strips of ribbons stretching under his flying wings and a tremendous war record behind him. He commanded the Eleventh Bombardment Group of Fortresses at Pearl Harbor, Midway and the Solomons.

Saunders is of the class of 1928. He came out of Aberdeen, S. Dak., in 1923 to win a berth at tackle on the Army team as a plebe, and never yielded it. He was part and parcel of the greatest series of teams the Army ever had. His teammates, many of whom are now full colonels with blazing war records, were men like Moe Daly and Tom Trapnell (both captured by the Japs when the Philippines fell), Rosy O'Donnell, Light Horse Harry Wilson, Tiny Hewitt, Art Meehan, the late Bosco Smith, Charlie Born, Bill Wood, Ed Garbisch, Chick Harding, Skipper Seaman, Bud Sprague and the late Chris Cagle.

The 1927 Army team, with All-Americans Wilson, Hewitt and Cagle in the backfield, lost one game, and that to Yale. The 1926 team lost only to Notre Dame, when Christy Flanagan ran wild and tied the Navy in the historic 21-21 tie. The 1925 team beat the Irish 28-0 in Yankee Stadium. It was one of the worst physical beatings Notre Dame ever took.

That night when the battered Notre Dame players were being carried back to South Bend, Knute Rockne came into their car and looked them over for a time. Then he growled, "Don't feel too bad about that walloping Army gave us today, boys. Someday we might have another war, and you'll be glad you've got guys like that to fight for our side."

Saunders would have preferred to talk football today with the sportswriters, and did manage to get in a little about the not-so-old days. But the boys wanted to talk about his decorations. Saunders, aside from being one of the youngest generals, is one of the most decorated men in the Army. He has won the Navy Cross, given to few Army men; the Distinguished Service Medal, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Silver Star, and the Purple Heart with Oak Leaf Clusters.

He talked little about the adventures that brought those rewards. His Purple Heart came on the morning of December 7, 1941, at Hickam Field, near Honolulu. He was wounded in the Jap sneak attack, but he got one of his Flying Fortresses in the air and went out to look for their carriers. The Silver Star was for a bombing attack on Jap battleships last October 12 off the Solomons. The Distinguished Service Medal came for his general command of his Fortresses based on Guadalcanal—" . . . the Japs must've known we were going to take that airfield they were building, for they built it in about the worst place on the island." At Midway his Fortresses blasted a huge armada of Jap carriers, cruisers, destroyers and troop ships in one of the most decisive battles in the war.

The rarely-awarded Navy Cross was won last November 18. He led five Fortresses attacking Jap shipping at Bougainville, sinking two fat transports in the Buin area. Saunders' five Forts were jumped by 50 Zeros. "We knocked down 17 of them," he told us quietly, "but the others stuck with us. Their cannon fire knocked out two of my engines, killed the pilot of our plane. The wing was on fire and the copilot was dying." Saunders skipped that part of the story wherein he crawled up to the pilot's compartment, though wounded badly in one hand, and seized the controls of the crippled bomber.

"I brought it down in the water," he continued. "It's a tough way to land, but, I guess, it isn't too bad. The Japs were all around us, but that evening a Navy flying boat came out after us with a fighter escort and picked us up." The young general further neglected to state—as did the Navy decoration—that he was flung against the windshield when the Fort hit the water and was badly cut about the forehead, but helped six men out of the sinking plane.

We asked him if he had learned anything on the West Point football team that helped him in these harrowing battles.

"Yes, a lot," he said, weighing his answer. "The good coaching. But best of all, our boys never fold up and quit, as you'll find that some of our enemies will. I guess American fighters have a football outlook on things. They know that no matter how dark things look they might still come up with a forward pass—and score."

Phillies Rally To Gain Split With Giants

By the Associated Press

New York, June 13.—The New York Giants whipped the Philadelphia Phillies, 6 to 2, behind Carl Hubbell's seven-hit hurling in the first game of a double-header today, but lost the second, 6 to 3, as the Phillies rallied for four runs in the ninth inning.

The climax of this uprising was a double by Babe Dahlgren with the bases loaded and it need not have happened. Dahlgren first was hit by pitchel ball, but the Giants argued that he had stepped into the pitch. Umpire Beans Reardon ordered him to bat again and this time he doubled.

Sid Gordon drove in New York's first two runs with a double and Joe Orengo hit a homer for the other.

Orengo, Gordon and Ernie Lombardi also hit home runs in the first game to lead a 16-hit attack that made Hubbel's second success easy. He lost a shutout when Jim Wasdell homered after Roy Northey had singled in the eighth.

Miller Furniture Beats Frederick, 6-4

Frederick, Md., June 13—The Miller Furniture Co. nine of Washington shoved across two runs in the tenth inning here today to defeat the Frederick Hustlers, 6-4. Frederick overcame an early Miller lead in the seventh inning when Delauter homered with two mates aboard, but the visitors tied it in the eighth and picked on Delauter for two more runs in the tenth to win.

Cubs Score, 4-1, After Bowing, 10-6, to Reds

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 13.—After humbling the Chicago Cubs, 10 to 6, on a 20-hit attack in the first game of a doubleheader today before 28,557, the Cincinnati Reds could get only seven blows from Big Bill Lee and lost the afterpiece, 4 to 1.

Lonnie Frey, with a double and four singles in six trips led the bombardment in the opener, which saw Claude Passeau, first of five Cub pitchers, kayoed in a five-run third inning.

Indians Divide With Browns, 3-1 and 2-1

By International News Service

Cleveland, June 13.—Having dropped four straight games to the lowly St. Louis Browns, the Cleveland Indians kept themselves out of the American League cellar by winning the second game of their double-header today, scoring a 2-to-1 victory in ten innings.

They had dropped the first part of Sunday's twin bill, 3 to 1. A crowd of 13,116 fans saw the two games.

The Indians won the nightcap on Orris Hockett's fourth hit of the game—a single to right which scored Gene Desautels and which gave Jim Bagby his sixth victory of the year. Bagby allowed seven hits while the Indians were reaching Denny Galehouse for 12.

Bob Muncrief chalked up his second decision of the series in hurling the Browns to their first-game victory.

SINGING POWERS GIRL TO MAYFLOWER. Elayne Hume, blonde Powers model who graduated into a top nitery songstress with Dick Gasparre's band, will open in the Mayflower Lounge tonight. Elayne said goodby to New York's Monte Carlo at 3 a. m. today, entrained for Washington, will rehearse with Johnny Shaw's band this afternoon. She'll have a ready-made public in our town due to her recent national broadcasts with Gasparre.

The tenth anniversary of Eugene Meyer's ownership of The Post was celebrated by Editor - Publisher Meyer and The Post staff at a luncheon in the Statler's South American Room on Saturday.

CARLOS MOLINA and his orchestra will return to Del Rio tomorrow night. You'll remember their ticklish tango rhythm of last year. Fans of Pan-American rhythm say there are three outstanding Latin-American bands—Cugat's, Madriguera's and Molina's.

CALIFORNIA, HERE WE COME! "California Night" will make Glen Echo ballroom vibrate on Wednesday, June 23. All "Golden Staters" are invited to come out and meet Maestro Paul Kain, also a "native son." With Californians pouring into town every day, you'll probably run into old school mates and home town friends.

T-Bone Walker and his Three Chops will dish up unrationed rhythm in the Brown Derby, starting tonight. They promise jive that'll be thick, tender and rare.

FRANKIE GETS PAPERS. Last week Frankie Garner became bandleader at the Casino Royal, replacing "Jivin' Jack" Shaffer, now at Camp Lee. On Saturday Frankie received notice to visit the Army medicos . . . This week's new revue at Casino Royal includes Keelin and Miller, clowning adagioteers, skating Continental Duo, Claire Ray Girls in fresh novelty numbers. There'll be a new emcee, too—a boy this time.

MISSES' DEPARTMENT. Life's greatest problem for Hastings Twins at Restaurant '400' is getting duplicate sets of smart frocks, especially with store stocks often in a state of wartime depletion . . . Felicia Flores of the Copocabana would've delighted an artist the other eve. Her dress was trimmed with this stuff they call "spaghetti fringe" and she was eating a plate of spaghetti . . . Roberta, the seeress of Old New Orleans, is looking chipper as a lark after her lengthy hospital stay . . . Goody! Goody! Mary La Marr, who sang so cleverly in Carlton's Cosmos Room, has been chosen to fill in for Eve Knight of King Cole Room when she vacations in July . . . Another happy item is Jane Marlow is back in Restaurant "823" after spending many weeks out West . . . Warbler Peggy Leonard of Hi Hat says most glamorous years of her life were two she spent in Bermuda singing with Al Donohue's band.

It's a big birthday cake and a party to match for Maestro Rocco Terrone at Treasure Island this evening. He's 29 years young today.

A sailor sends us this beautiful tribute to the Anchor Room: "It's the Navy's ideal of the cocktail lounge they'd like to have on shipboard."

BACKGROUNDS. Frank Victor of the Neptune Room started his cereer in a minstrel show, gave it up because he couldn't stand washing burnt cork off his face three times a day . . . Jeanne Bon, now dancing at the Lotus, recently returned from a USO tour of Alaska. . . . Dardanelle of Mayfair selects all her clothes, even her formals, to harmonize with her bandsmen's uniforms . . . Shep Fields, who's making such splendrous music at Uline's, was reared in the Catskills, where his father ran a resort hotel. . . . Exotic as a white orchid is Mayla, Eurasian singer at the Troika. Chinese and Russian blood are mingled in her veins . . . Roy Comfort of Lounge Riviera says the hardest job he ever had in his life was rehearsing a musical for George M. Cohan. He played for a solid 24 hours . . . Does anyone remember when Milton Davis of the Rainbow Room played the organ in the Palace Theater? . . . Mischa Bess, owner of the Balalaika, started the first Russian restaurant in Hollywood.

Changes Have Been Made To Quicken Fun on Roof

Willard Takes Steps to Increase Enjoyment; Amateur Talent Scout Drops a Hint; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

BY WAY of allaying suspicion that the opening night congestion and discomfort on the Willard Roof, where the Willard Roof Players are presenting "Bertha the Sewing Machine Girl" as their inaugural attraction, is a continuing harassment, now might be as good a time as any to relay Director Dick Midgely's word that the stage has been raised a level and three microphones installed to offset the elongated sight lines and the difficulty of hearing, since the rostrum has been placed at the end, instead of the side, of the Willard's grand ballroom.

EDWARD ARNOLD

This will be good news to those who had usherettes and waitresses climbing out of their ears last Monday night, when the proceedings were for the benefit of the Washington Stage Door Canteen. The canteen people, by the way, are greatly edified by the receipts of last Monday's "permeer," and so are the Willard factotums. The canteen realized a tidy sum with which to sandwich-and-soft-drink the uniformed forces of the United Nations.

This leaves only a disgruntled minority of the cash customers and a critic or two on the adverse side, as a result of last Monday night's elbow-to-elbow intimacy, inaudibility and general incoherence of what should have been a lustrous occasion.

There are those who will tell you it was lustrous, notwithstanding the handicaps.

Those among the filmgazers whose memories go back that far and embrace a bit of recollection of the National Theater Players en route, will detect a striking resemblance between Dana Andrews, with Tyrone Power and Anne Baxter in "Crash Dive," and Donald Woods, former leading man with the Steve Cochran ensemble on E Street. I am being told that when he wore the mustache, Dana didn't look so much like Donald. That was before my time. Coming up now out of no more than three or four decades of looking at that silver sheet, I can hardly tell them apart.

And that, as the saying goes, reminds me. Donald Woods was only one of the former National leading men who made the grade in Hollywood. On the basis of this week's exhibits, Minor Watson should come first among the others, by virtue of his appearance in both "Crash Dive," at the Palace, and "Action in North Atlantic," at the Earle. He is a naval officer in both. His current prevalence, however, does not obscure memory of the fact that Ed Arnold, John Litel—and whatever has become of him of late?—Stanley Ridges and divers and sundry others made their marks on E Street before going on to glory in the gelatins.

Some weeks ago we had something to say here about the informative and entertainment value of an item known as "Merchant Seamen," dealing with the training and duties of the personnel of the mercantile marine, for which, one sultry afternoon, we comprised a one-man "preview audience" in the private projection room of Mr. Lowell Mellett's segment of the OWI. We remarked then that it was quite a picture, as short-reelers go. It takes on added significance now, as a new feature of the holdover bill at RKO-Keith's, since it dovetails so perfectly with "Action in the North Atlantic," the major screen feature at the Earle. As a matter of fact, the pictures are totally unrelated, except as to subject matter, but the one, nevertheless, complements the other with extraordinary apiness. "Merchant Seamen" will show you what the lads who participate in "Action in the North Atlantic" had to undergo in the way of training before they got their berths on the Liberty Ship that underwent such a U-boat bludgeoning on its way to Murmansk. Furthermore, "Merchant Seamen" serves as a bit of an example of the skill of local talent. Bill McClure, once a protege of Father Gilbert V. Hartke, out at Catholic University, had a hand in its making and importuned us to see it ahead of time. Bill, now in uniform, at present is on another junket, filming a new number in the "This Is America" series, having to do with the Alcan Highway. It, too, probably will be good, and for the same reason.

Tip to the Talent Scouts

Comes a letter, to wit: "Dear Mr. Bell: Last week I attended a high school assembly in celebration of Woodrow Wilson High School's victory in the D. C. inter-high track meet. At that assembly I heard one of the most humorous speeches I have ever listened to. It was given by the youngest of the Woodrow Wilson coaches, Duke Jacobs. This young man really is a rival of Bob Hope's and everybody who heard his talk and watched his antics will agree with me. I realize that I may not be a competent judge of talent, but I'm comparing Duke Jacobs with the people I've seen on the stages of the Earle and Capitol theaters and he ranks above the majority of them in likableness and talent. Here's a real chance for someone to make a 'find.'"

Okay, Harry Anger, Gene Ford, et al., there it is!

After due contemplation, blasphemy and research, we have reached the conclusion that there is nothing to be done about such typographical things as have happened recently between these column rules. When "mundane" comes out in print as "mundance;" "successively" as "successfully"—as it did in the review of "Cabin in the Sky"—and "Coney Island" is made "Cooney," we just stretch out and laugh. Oh, yeah? C'est la guerre, no doubt!

And speaking of that "Cabin in the Sky," what a field day for dentifrice ads!

Far-Be-It-From-Us Note

Some smart alec probably will want to know if it is possible that the United Nations caught the Axis with its Pantellerias down!

A Notable Revival at the Pix

By Marjorie Kelly

A distinguished film is added this week to the roster of photoplays made by the excellent director, Fritz Lang, which the Pix Theater has been reviving.

"M, The Kidnaper," formerly known simply as "M," began a return engagement on Saturday and will run through Friday. This is the film in which the blandly sinister Peter Lorre made his first spectacular success. It was made in Germany some years ago and was first shown in this country with subtitles; however, someone has since then done a very good job of dubbing in English dialogue.

Lorre plays a criminally insane young man whose idiosyncrasy is murdering little girls. The whole city is terrorized, and the police force has devoted its full strength in trying to find him, and in the process of doing so they harass the known criminals of the city until there's no peace for them. The criminals decide they will have no rest until the man is caught, and set out to catch him themselves by having all the professional beggars in town shadow everybody they see making friends with children.

Lorre plays the obsessed young man with a restraint and understanding that makes him almost sympathetic in his inability to control the dreadful compulsion to kill.

Fritz Lang's genius for significant detail is apparent throughout. He is handling a delicate subject, and yet the film is never sordid, chiefly because of Lang's ability to suggest what can be left to the audience's imagination. A child's balloon caught between telegraph wires, for instance; a ball bouncing out of a clump of bushes and rolling to a stop, or a whistled bar of music from "Peer Gynt" that identifies the murderer and symbolizes the grip of his obsession.

And there are enriching details that apparently add nothing essential, serving only the purpose of giving depth and realism to the piece, but which on further examination are essential, too, seeming irrelevant only because of their casualness. Such as the murderer's fondness for eating—he is always seen munching candy or fruit. But when you consider that, you remember that a man who is sensuous in one thing always is sensuous in others, and the failing of eating too much and too often does much to humanize a man who is not easily rendered understandable.

"City of Lost Men," the other picture on the double bill, is the most tedious and least horrifying "horror" picture we have seen in many a moon.

Not a Bad Idea for This Weather!

ELYSE KNOX

finds it convenient that the Los Angeles River flows practically alongside the Universal studios in Hollywood. Between scenes she takes time out to do a little wading, even as you and I would under identical circumstances. That "between scenes" business, incidentally, is during the making of "Mr. Big," in which she plays an important role

HEDDA HOPPER

'Pirate' Has 'Revenge!'

Hollywood, Calif., June 13.—Casey Robinson's gain is Fred Allen's loss—also the Lunts'. Alan Reed, who played Socrates with Allen for so long, also was in "The Pirate" with the Lunts. He has been signed for "Revenge." He was to join the Lunts this summer for their London engagement of "The Guardsman," but when Reed told them he had a chance for a good part in pictures, they not only released him, but Alfred coached and directed him in his test . . . Preston Sturges has finished his original story, "Hail the Conquering Hero." Eddie Bracken will star in it. They need a girl like Tedesa Wright to play opposite him. The story revolves about a baby born the day his father was killed in Belleau Wood. He got a medal pinned on him when a baby, lived under its shadow until maturity, and the day after Pearl Harbor enlists in the Marines, then goes on from there.

GEORGE RAFT

Request Not Granted

Jack Warner outsmarted himself and lost a star when he told that Cary Grant would do "Destination —Tokio." Harry Cohn heard of it. He hit the ceiling—so "My Client Curley," Harry's picture with Grant, goes into production in two weeks. Now that Hal Wallis has put in a bid for Grant for the lead in "God Is My Co-Pilot," written by Col. Robert Lee Scott, who will be here in a couple of weeks, just about the time his book comes out. Scott is credited with bringing down 18 Jap planes. At 34 he was told he was too old to fight, so went to China and joined Chennault. His story is built around that . . . One of our nicest guests here is Capt. Bud Jorman. His squadron is credited with wiping out 10,000 Japs, so he had the choice of his next location. Instead of staying here, he chose China.

Short Shorts

George Raft claims he knows a girl so mercenary she gave Congress the idea for the "pay-as-you-go plan!" . . . Milton Berle wires that he just met a loan shark so crooked that if he turned around fast, he'd bore a hole in the floor! . . . Bob Hope airmails that when Skinnay Ennis was inducted into the Army they presented his red corpuscles with a pair of water wings so they could swim up Skinnay's blood stream! . . . Joan Davis chuckles that since the meat shortage has become so acute every one in Hollywood is biting the hands that feed them! . . . George Brent swears he knows a producer who is so much in love with his wife he postponed their divorce for another six months . . . Hollywood has its own menagerie: Leo the lion, Mickey the mouse, Donald the duck and the wolves at the Brown Derby!

It Ain't Good

Charlie Chaplin would be startled if he could read my fan mail. The women's clubs of America are signing petitions all over the place. They're hoping for deportation on the grounds of moral terpitude. I hear the immigration department is investigating every angle of his stay here. Too bad he had to bring in his young sons to testify in his defense. It looks as though Chaplin, Harry Bridges' chum, will get action at that, but not the kind he asked for . . . A group of visiting WAACS after watching Peter Lorre mow down 35 prisoners in "A Thousand Shall Fall," called him the "No, I hangup boy."

Trans-Lux

"The Invasion of Europe," named after a topic uppermost in the public mind, is the chief feature of the new bill at the Trans-Lux Theater.

Revelatory of any number of "jumping off places," this subject also is notable for the inclusion of more than a few "clips" of captured Nazi films depicting conditions well inside Germany. Not only does this reel contemplate the numerous avenues of Allied approach to the Fortress of Europe, but it discloses also the extent to which the Axis has gone to fortify the positions it deems most vulnerable to attack. It is given a heightened appeal by the surrender of Pantelleria and the consequent conjectures as to where the next blow will fall.

The news section of the new bill also is more or less preoccupied with the question of invasion and cites the subjection of Attu as further evidence that the offensive now rests entirely with the United Nations. There is, of course, the usual complete coverage of news events throughout the world, with no little emphasis on the home front.

Paced by the "North African Album" Victory Reel, i..e short subjects also embrace "Winter Setting," a sports resume of activities at Sun Valley, Idaho, and, for the lighter touch, "Plenty Below Zero," a new color rhapsody.

Gossip From Gotham

New York, June 13.

The publishing house of Simon & Schuster occupies a glass-walled suite, with terraces, at Rockefeller Center. It is one of the most unusual offices in the city . . . A few days ago M. Lincoln Schuster met John D. Rockefeller, jr., in the gardens of the plaza there. "You're a wonderful landlord," said Schuster. "We consider it a privilege to be your tenants. You should come up and see our flowers in bloom. It's a wonderful place" . . . "Yes, I know," said Rockefeller. "I have an office across the plaza from you" . . . "Why didn't you take our place for your office?" asked Schuster . . . "Because," replied Rockefeller, "I can't afford it."

PEARL BUCK

A new committee, headed by Pearl Buck and including Wendell Willkie on its board, is being organized and will be called the Committee Against Racial Discrimination in the War Effort. It will fight against discrimination in industry, public housing, trade unions, Government civilian employment and the voluntary services . . . Neither butter nor coffee was served at the dinner Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt gave for the Duke and Duchess of Windsor . . . Frank Sinatra will costar with Michele Morgan in an RKO movie . . . Jan Valtin, author of "Out of the Night," was attacked by bow-and-arrow from a cell window at Ellis Island during his stay there.

Theodore Dreiser has great faith in the immortality of his writings—faith which resulted in an unusual realty transaction. Some years ago Dreiser owned a house in Mount Kisco, N. Y. Eventually, when he began to roam throughout America, he sold that house to a New York dentist . . . And now, while he himself lives in Hollywood, Dreiser repurchased that Mount Kisco home to preserve it—for, after all, America some day might seek a shrine in his honor.

Abbott & Costello are buying up all the copies of a recording they made in 1938, in which they used the old draft-law gag: "When the time comes, the three of us will go—me and the two guys who'll have to drag me" . . . Paul Robeson, who majored in languages while he was at Rutgers, will introduce a simplified course of language studies, via a series of recordings . . . Westbrook Van Voorhis, who has been the Voice of the March of Time for eight years—during which his face never has been seen by the public—will make his screen debut in the March of Time's "Invasion." He will be shown as the chairman of a meeting of commentators.

American troops stationed in New Guinea are being subjected to conflicting propaganda projects. Radio Tokyo features recordings of familiar American song-hits to remind the American troops of their homes, their girls and their families. "Quit and go back to these," is the suggestion from Tokyo. . . . The San Francisco stations beamed at New Guinea also feature recordings of these old song-hits, as a reminder of home ties. "These are worth fighting for," is the theme of the U. S. A. broadcasts. And so in New Guinea these nights the propaganda conflict continues—with our Government using nostalgia to build up morale, and the enemy using nostalgia to break it down.

Army officers who witnessed Martha Raye's achievements in North Africa proposed her for the Air Medal, but then one high official turned it down . . . When Collier's accepted Carl Sandburg's poem for publication in a forthcoming issue and asked how much he wanted, Sandburg said: "The fact that you're using it is the important thing. I have more than enough recognition and I have enough money—so name your own price." . . . Swifty Morgan was at the station to meet a relative of Bernard Baruch's who came up to New York. "He came here," Swifty reports, "because his allowance of $100,000 a week from Bernie was three days overdue."

Sound Advice

Martha Raye visited Bob Hope on Paramount's "Let's Face It" set to tell the comedian what he should and should not take with him on his tour to Africa. She has returned from a long stint of entertaining soldiers there, is going back within the next two months.

Post Concerts Commended By Leaders

District music leaders were enthusiastic in their laudatory comments yesterday on the Starlight Concerts to be sponsored by The Washington Post in tranquil Meridian Park. They agreed the musical programs will not only offer pleasant entertainment away from Washington's jostling crowds but will serve as a source of inspiration to thousands of music lovers.

Every one of the directors and teachers announced they intended to recommend students and musical colleagues attend the concert series on Saturday and Sunday nights from June 26 through August 22.

Reasons cited by the musicians as to why they consider the concerts a definite contribution to the musical life of Washington varied from the recreational value of melody under the stars to enlightenment of those devoted to good music and others with a less developed musical education.

Louis A. Potter, director of the Washington Choral Society, described Meridian Park as an ideal rustic setting in which to hear gifted musicians, offering a haven remote from the city bustle. He added:

"I have noticed the programs will provide a fine type of chamber music. There has been a great need here for this type, which is characteristically presented by smaller groups of musicians in a closer relationship of performers and audience. I particularly want to hear the Trapp Family Singers."

Harlan Randall, acting president of the Washington Music Teachers Association, expressed opinion the concert should be regarded as more than an excellent opportunity for relaxation and entertainment. "I think we will have the higher value of receiving inspiration from the rhapsodical performances," he said.

Season Continues

Miss Thelma Callahan, president of the Federation of Music Clubs, said she was glad music lovers now have opportunity of attending concerts during the summer instead of stopping at the end of spring, formerly the close of the concert season. She added that the Starlight Concerts have a varied program that is appealing to all types of people.

Weldon Carter, director of Washington Musical Institute, mentioned several musicians scheduled on the program whom he hopes to hear and plans to recommend to his pupils as excellent talent. Among these was Albert Spalding, world-famed violinist who will be the first performer in the series.

La Salle Spier, past president of Washington Music Teachers Association, referred to the American Ballad Singers who are scheduled for July 17 and 18, explaining much more attention should be given to American music of this type.

said by police to have been unable to swim.

During the storm, numerous mishaps were reported to police whose work was seriously handicapped by static hindering the operation of police radios. Lightning hit the police substation at Waterloo, Md., and put it out of order for an hour and a half.

Among the accidents was one involving a fire engine from Arlington, Va., which skidded at Wilson Boulevard and Fort Myer Drive and caused injury to two firemen. Carl Richtheart of 914 Stewart Street, was admitted to Georgetown Hospital with undetermined injuries, while George W. Skidmore of 1011 Stafford Street, suffered a fractured right arm and was treated at Emergency, police said.

The District Park Police earlier in the day reported a near capacity number of picnickers utilizing the facilities in the public parks with a large number of persons seeking relief from the heat by sleeping there.

The Capital Transit Co., reported a capacity number of District residents riding streetcars and busses to the city's picnic grounds, the zoo and recreation centers.

Trainees Under CAA Program To Be Members of Air Forces

All Air Corps Enlisted Reservists who are selected to continue Civil Aeronautics Administration pilot training will be given full status as members of the Army Air Forces on active duty, R. McLean Stewart, CAA training director announced last night.

This move, agreed to by the Army at CAA's request will bring in an estimated 7000 men into the Air Corps.

Men now taking the training who wish to be returned to civilian life may obtain a discharge by filing a request not later than June 26. No discharges will be granted after July 1. The names of all who discontinue training will be referred to their draft boards.

Many persons now taking the training will have to be returned to civilian life anyway, since the new program limits to 7000 the number of men to whom such instruction can be given.

Those selected to continue training will receive Army pay of $50 per month, and wear regular uniform. The training in non-combat flying will be maintained by the CAA, which also will make arrangements with colleges for ground school instruction and the housing and feeding of students.

Transit Strike Perils War Plants Output

Johnstown, Pa., June 13 (AP).—A strike of 275 streetcar operators and bus drivers in protest against a War Labor Board wage decision today threatened to tie up transportation of thousands of war-workers to steel plants.

The men, members of the A. F. L. Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes, walked out at 4:30 a. m., and while the effects of the strike were not felt immediately, fears were expressed that many workers would be stranded tomorrow.

The operators voted to strike after their local president, Roy Williams, disclosed the WLB had decided on a minimum wage award of 72 cents an hour, 8 cents less than that recommended by an arbitration panel.

Meanwhile, 22 bus drivers and mechanics of the Ohio River Motor Coach Co. at Pittsburgh who walked out Saturday were told by their union business agent to return to work tomorrow or face ouster from the union.

William Robinson, business agent for Division 85, A. F. L. Amalgamated Association of Street Railway and Motor Coach Employes, said the ultimatum was served at the direction of international officers.

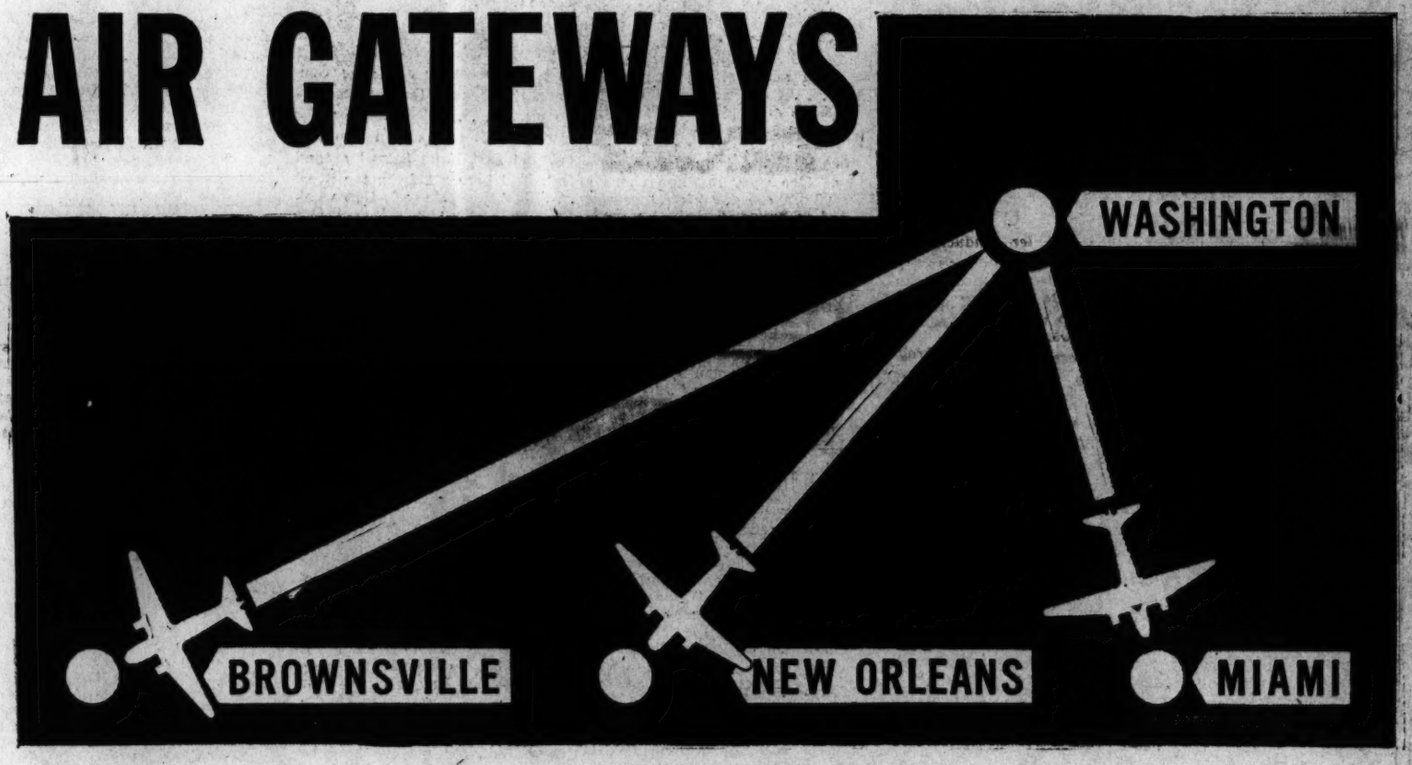
NOW...3 INTERNATIONAL AIR GATEWAYS



to Mexico, Central and South America

MIAMI, FLORIDA! . . .

BROWNSVILLE, TEXAS! . . .

These three cities now constitute the nation's principal international air gateways to Mexico, Central and South America . . . and Eastern Air Lines serves them all!

Pan American Airways' new service from New Orleans to Merida, Mexico; Guatemala City, Guatemala, and Balboa, Canal Zone, has opened a shorter, faster air route which connects with the route of The Great Silver Fleet.

Eastern Air Lines offers the shortest route to Mexico City . . . via Pan American Airways from Brownsville, Texas. This is the pioneer air service from the East to the Capital of our good neighbor to the South.

At Miami, Florida, The Great Silver Fleet connects with Pan American Airways' service to the Caribbean in addition to flights for South America.

Because it represents an important contribution to our war effort, Eastern Air Lines welcomes the opening of international air service from New Orleans. As the only air line serving all three international gateways, Eastern is in a position to serve all of Latin America!

Don't Hitch Ol' John to a Shay

John, the horse, doesn't like the fashions of his era: the Gay Nineties. At the sight of his patrons' costumes, John bolted when he was to take Richard Midgley and his wife for an eighth anniversary spin and ricocheted the rig from a streetcar to a taxi, to a fire plug and finally deposited the gay blade and his gracious lady at the foot of a sycamore tree near the White House.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Many Deferments Made By Boards Voluntarily

A check of the 89,000 deferred Federal employes has uncovered some interesting sidelights. First, local draft boards have deferred on their own motion several thousand Federal workers without an official request from the Government. In fact several agencies have tried to have unofficial deferments canceled and they have been told, in effect, to go jump in the lake by local draft boards. Justice Department is one of these. In other cases the employes themselves have maneuvered their own deferments and this is strictly against the law. The 89,000 figure includes all people on Navy, TVA, War and National Advisory Committee for Aeronautics replacement schedules. These people aren't strictly deferred and they'll be called into the service soon. Selective Service now must make monthly reports to Congress on deferred employes.

A veteran employe in Agriculture's Office of Information was ill recently. When she returned to her desk she was given a card on which she was asked to give her reason for being absent. This was her explanation:

"I was sick. I couldn't find a doctor, so I followed the advice of a veterinarian in the Bureau of Animal Industry."

And it was all too true. The vet did prescribe for the employe. And the vet did all right by her. The lady was back at work after following his advice for one day.

Any doctor in a sickness is now her motto.

Kenneth Galbraith, who quit recently as No. 2 man at the Office of Price Administration, tells friends he has discovered the fifth freedom. "The fifth freedom," he says, "is the freedom from responsibility." Galbraith is job-hunting . . . John K. Westberg, the OPA price official who has been going over the country to proclaim that he was going to quit in disgust, was traveling on Government funds. And did that burn up the OPA officials? . . . A number of interesting charges on the administration of Rural Electrification Administration will be brought out in broad daylight soon. The replacement of Administrator Harry L. Slattery will be sought by powerful groups. Clyde Ellis, the coop leader, is a stanch friend of REA, but he's now fighting its administration out in the open.

Last Friday Representative Walter L. Judd, Minnesota Republication, called on the President. The eminent physician-missionary had a cold. He didn't want to expose the President to his ailment so he whipped out a physician's mask from his brief case and placed it over his mouth. As he walked into the President's office a newsman cracked: "That's how the President likes his congressmen—gagged" . . . If you're one of the many Federal workers who have been "frozen" in your jobs through failure to qualify for Civil Service under the 1940 Ramspeck Act, you may now be promoted or transferred in war service jobs . . . The labor division of the War Savings Staff is planning to announce the sales of billions in war bonds to labor unions or Labor Day. Federal employe unions should get behind the program.

The Canadian government has adjusted the salaries of its civil servants. The Canadian employes, however, lost on two important points. They were refused overtime pay and a general reclassification of positions. Nevertheless, cost-of-living bonuses were given to employes who are paid less than $3000. The salaries paid civil servants in this country are small fortunes in comparison. . . . That Byrd Committee report on personnel—so long delayed—has been scheduled for release Wednesday. . . . The Brotherhood of Sensible Men is praying for a nice warm day tomorrow—about 96—to get more men to take off their hot coats and high collars and wear breezy slack suits to work. Tomorrow is the official day of the men's revolution and it will be commemorated by a get-together on the Ellipse at 5:30. Be there and have fun.

Our dictionary of bureaucratese, or Washington double-talk, continues to grow. Today's lesson:

Excellent efficiency rating (means)—Something which you have to have in order to get something which you can never get.

This is out of my jurisdiction—Brother, you can pass that hot potato onto someone else.

Authority—that which makes some people grow and others swell.

To have functional control—You tell them what to do and they'll tell you where to go.

Personal questionnaire—Fill out 10 or 12 of these and after analysis and interviews you'll be asigned to just the kind of position you've been trying to avoid all your life.

Politician—A person who can straddle a fence and keep both ears to the ground at the same time.

Send us your definitions. The book isn't closed yet.

Postlude

First Sunset Symphony Thrills 10,000

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Sunday night in the first summer concert at the Potomac Watergate. Soloist: Oscar Shumski, Musician First Class U. S. Navy. Program: Algerian March (Saint-Saens), Adagion from Organ Toccata in C Major (Bach), Violin Concerto in E minor (Mendelssohn), Romeo and Juliet (Chaikovski), Waltz from "Evgen Onegin" (Chaikovski), Chanson Triste (Chaikovski), Marche Slav (Chaikovski).

Despite a late afternoon thunderstorm that still muttered along the southern horizon at the twilight hour and in cheerful acceptance of transportation difficulties, an audience estimated at nearly 10,000 assembled at the Potomac Water Gate last evening for the first "Sunset Symphony" of the summer. The confidence of the National Symphony Orchestra management that the public would respond as usual to the attraction of these open-air concerts, whatever inconvenience might be involved in a walk or hayride from the terminus of the nearest streetcar line, was fully justified. The crowd was a little slower in gathering than has been customary, but when Hans Kindler came to the podium, the terraced steps of the "gallery" were filled from side to side and the reserved sections showed few vacancies.

Thank to the activities of the Coast Guard, the start of the program was not delayed by the accidental shifting of the orchestral barge two hours before. At the hight of the storm the barge dragged its mooring and drifted some 20 feet down stream, leaving behind the ramp by which the musicians reach it from the shore. This displacement was corrected, however, in ample time for the orchestra players to be in their places.

The cloud wrack of the storm, tinted with sunset colors, added its bit to the attractiveness of the most picturesque of American summer concert sites, and one noticed that the auditors were watching the spectacle in the sky as well as listening to the music. During the first part of the concert, a cumulus cloud to the south, towering like a gray cliff, was continually fissured by lightning flashes. As this was a departing and not an advancing play of the elements, there was no uneasiness in the crowd.

Doubtless with reference to recent happenings in North Africa, Dr. Kindler began the concert with the lively march from Saint-Saens' "Algerian Suite." The contrasting selection that followed was the slow movement from Bach's Organ Toccata in C major, excellently arranged by the conductor. The major work presented was the Mendelssohn violin concerto in which the soloist was Oscar Shumski of the Navy Band, who was given a most cordial reception.

His reading of the solo part was done in impeccable style, and his tone came through the amplifiers with pure clarity. He played with a technical ease and surety that took meticulous care with every phrase, and he respected the tempi scrupulously without once prolonging a note for its emotional effect.

The second half of the program was devoted to popular compositions by Chaikovski: the fantasy-overture, "Romeo and Juliet;" the romantic waltz from "Evgen Onegin," a transcription of the violin piece, "Chanson Triste;" and the patriotic "Slavic March." When the audience made the inevitable request for extra numbers, Dr. Kindler was ready with his arrangement of two Russian fighting songs, and Lehar's "Gold and Silver" waltz.

Formally dedicated to members of the armed forces of the United States and the United Nations, the concert was followed by an unannounced massing of the colors. The orchestra broke into Sousa's "The Stars and Stripes" and a large American flag was unfurled at the back of the reflecting shell. To the strains of "America," the flags of the United Nations were brought on the stage by a color guard from the Army, Navy, Marines, Coast Guard, WAACS, WAVES, Women's Marine Reserves and SPARS. As a finaale, the French Tricolor was introduced with the playing of "La Marseillaise."

Heat Makes Warm Advocates For More Sensible Male Garb

Yesterday's heat was exactly what the Brotherhood of Sensible Men were thinking of when they proposed taking off collars and ties, vests and jackets.

Yesterday's heat was only a forecast of what is to come this summer.

It was 95 degrees in the shade.

In the most formidable protest against protocal yet made in Washington, the Brotherhood of Sensible Men will meet tomorrow between 5:30 and 6:15 p. m. in the Ellipse, south of the White House, to say what they think about stiff collars, neckties and coats during the months of heat and humidity in Washington.

As part of the observance of B. S. M. day, Charles Planck, whose letter to Jerry Kluttz started the campaign, has planned a contest among the men in slacks and sport shirts to determine the best dressed man and proclaim him the Most Sensible Man of Washington. Every Federal employe is eligible and there is no entry fee.

Girls from all Government agencies are invited to attend the meeting to serve as judges in the contest which will be decided by applause as the men parade before the jury.

A few tips to contestants might not be amiss. Ties and collars are strictly taboo. Vests and jackets are strictly on the blacklist and in fact, nothing should be barred with the possible exception of shorts.

For a longer time than is comfortable to think about official protocol has dictated that the properly dressed Government man wear all the appurtenances which are considered the proper dress for business men. In 95-degree temperatures this meant collars and ties, business suits and the other accessories which make a man sweat during his working hours.

A mention of Planck's letter in the Federal Diary brought such a heavy mail commending the protest that The Post decided to do something about it. Tomorrow's contest on the Ellipse is the result.

Peak Feared In Demands For Water

Restrictions Likely If Long Dry Spell Comes to District, Official Warns

Water consumption in Washington is within 15 million gallons of the capacity of the filtration plant on hot dry days, Humphrey Beckett, superintendent of the District Water Division said yesterday.

The capacity of the filtration plant is 185 million a day. On June 5 the city consumed about 170 million gallons, the highest in the history of the city.

In consequence, Beckett said, if there occurs a hot dry spell of weather lasting a week or more, they expect consumption to jump to such an extent that restrictions will have to be placed on the use of water in air conditioning systems and the watering of lawns. Last to be restricted, he said, would be the use of water for victory gardens.

During normal prewar times the city customarily used about 100 million gallons of water a day with occasional days when consumption would jump to as high as 135 million. The greatest consumption last year was 167 million gallons in one day.

Scattered localities may suffer from shortages during the summer when heavy consumption is customary, due to insufficient capacity of transmission mains.

Laundry Fund Shortage Laid To Official

George Billings Galliand, 42, assistant secretary and assistant treasurer of the Manhattan Laundry, was charged with embezzlement yesterday in connection with a $25,451 shortage in company funds.

He was arrested Saturday night at his home, 1401 Sheridan Street Northwest, by Detective Sergts. John R. Luskey, David Higgins and Dewey Guest. The detectives said he admitted he appropriated the money and lost it gambling since February, 1941.

Specifically, the suspect was charged on the blotter with one case involving $1521, an amount obtained when he allegedly cashed a company check to replenish a drivers' change fund.

According to the detectives, Galliand handled all the money turned into the company by route men. Galliand confessed, it was said, that he took various sums ranging from $200 upwards to a thousand on different occasions.

A report from an accounting firm, held by police as evidence showed that on particular days the company's cash did not total the amounts turned in by drivers. Later, however, th audit disclosed the cash account showed an overamount equal to the previous shortage.

This condition, the auditors reported, according to police, continued for some time until a recent accounting disclosed the $25,000 shortage.

150 Enrolled for Red Cross Instruction at American U.

The seventy-third class of trainees for domestic and overseas service with the American Red Cross will start at the new personnel training unit quarters at American University this morning, Norman H. Davis, chairman, announced. Approximately 150 trainees will be enrolled in the class, first held at A. U.

Upon graduation, many trainees are sent to military posts for special training periods during which they get experience in carrying out Red Cross services to the armed forces under actual conditions.

"The university cherishes the relationship with the Red Cross," said Paul F. Douglass, president of American University, "as a part of its tradition, knowing that at a time when most of the institutions of higher learning are being operated as military barracks for the training of various types of assigned specialized programs, American University is the only institution which is privileged to offer its resources for the work of mercy and humanitarian service performed by the Red Cross.

The personnel training unit to date has trained 5735 men and women, more than 2000 of whom are now on duty overseas as field directors, recreation workers and hospital social service workers.

For the duration of the war the administrative offices of the college of arts and sciences at A. U. will be in Batelle Memorial and the administrative offices of the university will be at the downtown center, 1901 F Street.

War Law Series

A War Law Institute will open at National University tonight at 6:30 o'clock and continue Mondays and Wednesdays at the same time until July 21, Dr. Milton I. Baldinger, director, announced yesterday.

William Radner of the War Shipping Administration, will speak tonight on "Legal Controls Over Shipping."

The series will be held at the School of Law, 818 Thirteenth Street Northwest, and is open for the public.

Wallace Addresses Iowans On Grain Needs in S. America

Vice President Henry A. Wallace told fellow Iowans at the Iowa State Society's annual luncheon yesterday in the Roosevelt Hotel that Latin America countries which he has recently visited needed more and better seed corn.

Iowa is the leading corn producing State in the Union.

"There is plenty room for improving farm methods there," the Vice President explained, "although agricultural methods in South America may be somewhat improved."

All Latin America, he said, was behind in the development of all kinds of grain.

Nearly 400 persons attended the luncheon, many of whom were servicemen and women.

The Vice President's wife also was present.

Distinguished guests introduced included Mr. Justice Wiley Rutledge and Mrs. Rutledge; Senator and Mrs. Guy Gillette, Representative and Mrs. John Gwynne; Representative and Mrs. Ben Jensen; Representative and Mrs. Karl LeCompte, Representative and Mrs. Thomas Martin, Representative and Mrs. H. O. Talle, Representative and Mrs. Paul Cunningham, Representative and Mrs. Charles Hoeven, Chief Justice of the District Court of the United States for the District of Columbia and Mrs. E. C. Eicher, Justice F. Dickinson Letts, Commissioner and Mrs. Claude R. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. C. William Ramseyer, Mrs. Mariam Berryhill, C. B. Upham and others.

Inspectors Needed

Women are being encouraged to enroll in the program being launched by the Army Signal Corps to train civilian inspectors for duty in factories producing military telephone, radio and radar equipment, Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, commanding general, Third Service Command, said yesterday.

A salary of $1752 a year will be paid from the beginning of the six-week training program, which teaches the trainees electrical and radio terminology, use of diagrams and simple blueprints and factory processes. Applicants are advised to contact the nearest Civil Service Commission office.

Unity Cited At Exercises On Flag Day

Other Ceremonies Scheduled Today By Groups of Patriotic Citizens

The Stars and Stripes, honored this Flag Day as the banner of America's fighting legions, yesterday was presented alongside the flags of the 32 United Nations and a newly designed Flag of Four Freedoms in ceremonies of the American Legion and the Elks Club of Washington.

Calling for rededication to the spirit of unity on this "martial" Flag Day, President Roosevelt declared in his proclamation:

"We know that our flag is not fighting alone. This year the flags of 32 nations are marching together, borne forward by bravery of free men. Together they are the emblem of a gathering offensive that shall librate the world."

For the first time in an official ceremony, the Flag of the Four Freedoms was presented at American Legion services in Meridian Hill Park which was attended by nearly 400 people.

William E. Leahy, District Selective Service director, addressed the colorful gathering of the Elks Club members at Sylvan Theater. Numerous veterans' organizations participated in the ceremony which was preceded by a parade from Elks' headquarters to the Washington Monument grounds. A number of wounded soldiers took part.

Officials of numerous United of War Information announced last night.

Flag Day celebrations scheduled today include:

The Star-Spangled Banner, having completed its Nation-wide tour, will be received at the east steps of the Capitol in a short ceremony at 10 a. m.

Legion Post No. 42 will be addressed by Senator Davis (Republican) of Pennsylvania in the Department of Labor auditorium at 11 a. m.

A flag presentation by the District Society, Sons of the American Revolution, will be held at Kramer Junior High School at 2:30 p. m.

The United States Navy Band will participate in services at the east steps of the Capitol at 6:30 p. m.

Flag Day services of the Jewish War Veterans at the Jewish Community Center will begin at 8:30 p. m.

Retired Navy Officer Pens Salute to Flag

Tribute to the American flag, describing it as a symbol of God, home and country, has been composed by Comdr. John W. W. Cumming, N. S. N., retired, of Portsmouth, Va.

The 60-year-old commander, who turned to patriotic composition of poems and songs in 1935 after 26 years of active naval service, distributes the tribute which he had printed at his own expense. It is not copyrighted and Commander Cumming has authorized readers to use the tribute in any way they desire.

The tribute follows:

A salute to thee, Old Glory, the Stars and Stripes—Our Flag!

Thou wast born, June 14, 1777;

Thy field of blue with 48 stars of white doth represent the union of States while thy 13 stripes of red and white, the original colonies; but thou art more;

Thou art a silent symphony of Red, White and Blue, the harmony of Home and Country composed of God, Himself, the Master of Life, Liberty, Equality and the Pursuit of Happiness;

Thy azure Blue, like the firmament, displays now a galaxy, a constellation of bright shining stars in one of which each of us has a Home, yet, every other star is likewise a Home for each of us—one for all and all for one—a Perfect Union;

Thy stripes of White, six in number, emblazon on high, the purity of purpose of Creation by the Almighty God Whose Omniscience and Omnipotence, in six days, brought into being all there is, including Earth and over all therein gave He dominion to Man—and—God was pleased because all was good; thus was thy birth first planned;

Thy stripes of Red, seven in number, one for each day of the week in whcih to render passionate, living, virile worship and service to the Infinite, by man serving man in joy and sadness, in plenty and poverty, in health and sickness, regardless of cost, sacrifice, race, color or creed; thus do our part by Providence planned;

I salute thee, my Flag, because thou dost symbolize all I hold most dear—God! Home! Country! —and, I will defend thee against all enemies, domestic and foreign!

I salute thee!

Clamor for Better Daytime Radio Fare Brings Offer From Local Station to Sponsor Spanish Lessons, Provided Enough People Request the Program

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Recently you have published letters from Washington women who criticize the content and character of local radio programs. These letters have been read with interest by policy-makers of Station WINX. We have been impressed by many of the suggestions for improvement offered;—in particular, the suggestion for a 15-minute course of instruction in the Spanish language. Your readers who believe that Spanish lessons over the air would prove educational and interesting have only to put themselves on record to that effect with Station WINX, and this station will spare no expense in presenting a readily understandable course of Spanish instruction,—provided the number of potential listeners to such a program is sufficiently large to represent a substantial section of the listening public.

We at Station WINX want to broadcast the program that women want to hear. And the only way we can keep our policies and programs abreast of public taste is to have constructive criticism. Please be advised that this is not intended as an unpaid advertisement for WINX,—but rather a sincere effort at cooperation. Station WINX regards its radio audience as an intelligent group of people, whose preferences are entitled to serious consideration. We boast no outstanding stage or screen stars on our entertainment roster; but our efforts are continually invested in the origination and maintenance of good programs, designed to meet the approval of people of good judgment and good taste,—in which group your recent correspondents definitely belong. Sincerely yours,

LAWRENCE J. HELLER,
President.

Landslide of Letters Would Close the Deal

DEAR MR. HELLER: In the foregoing letter, you have put yourself on record as being among the most progressive citizens in Washington. And if my recent correspondents are equally ready to go into action to produce a bona fide adult-type educational program for women listeners, the deed is as good as done. Let us hope these aggressive advocates of constructive entertainment, as versus "soap opera," can speedily muster a show of hands sufficient to convince you that a substantial section of the Washington homemaker radio audience would respond cordially to your handsome offer.

And now a word to the ladies: Women of Washington, here is your chance to do yourselves a real favor. Here is a chance to set in motion a community-wide course of free instruction in Spanish, the favorite foreign language of the day, that you can "study" without leaving the house;—and all for the cost of two cents each: the cost of a stamp to let Station WINX know you would welcome such instruction.

If the homemakers whose letters were published June 4 and 10,—women who indignantly demanded a more cultural brand of "entertainment" from daytime radio,—spoke your sentiments, don't let this day pass without "putting in your two cents' worth" to that effect to Station WINX. Address your letters to Station WINX, Washington D. C. Don't send them to me. This is your project, not mine. And it is up to you to put it across,—or forever hereafter hold your peace.

M. H.

Another Crusader Enters the Arena

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I, for one, want to throw down a glove to "Minerva" and all like-minded women of Washington. Why not start a crusade for the kind of radio hour all intelligent homemakers want? On the morning of June 10, pursuant to the suggestion offered in "R. E. A.'s" letter, I wrote to the Women's Institute of Audience Reactions, at 9 Rockefeller Plaza, New York City, to ask if there was anything concrete that a group of Washington women could do to bring about a more intelligent brand of daytime radio program.

I set a date for the end of this month, to be in New York and talk with Miss Agnes McGrew, director of the Institute, about the possibilities of working toward a higher type of radio program for Washington women. And since I have a friend who helps manage a "homemaker program" with a New York station, I plan to ask her how programs are drafted and launched, how sponsors are secured, etc. If her answers have point, and if Washington women could profit by them, I should be happy to get them before the public. Perhaps you, Miss Haworth, would permit me to present them in letter form, at a later day.

For a long time, I have been concerned by the pressing need of better radio programs for women. In fact, for some months I had been collecting ideas for an article on the subject; and it is definitely encouraging,—and something of a load off my mind,—to find that other women have been thinking in the same vein, and feeling the need as much as I feel it. I only wish there were some way of calling a meeting of kindred spirits to start a community crusade for a first-class Women's Hour. But the question is: How to start the ball rolling? If a representative group could just get together, our motto undoubtedly would be, "Damn the torpedoes; full speed ahead." So please, Miss Haworth, don't let us down until something gets started. Yours sincerely

Way Has Been Opened To Start Ball Rolling

DEAR D. L. M.: I have chosen your letter for publication to round out today's column, because it is a typical example of the mail that continues to pour into this office,— urging action to secure a change for the better in daytime radio programs directed to women. As for "how to start the ball rolling,"—surely the way has been paved by the spirited offer to Station WINX to meet the public half way, by sponsoring a program of Spanish lessons, provided Washington's "woman audience" can prove a demand for it.

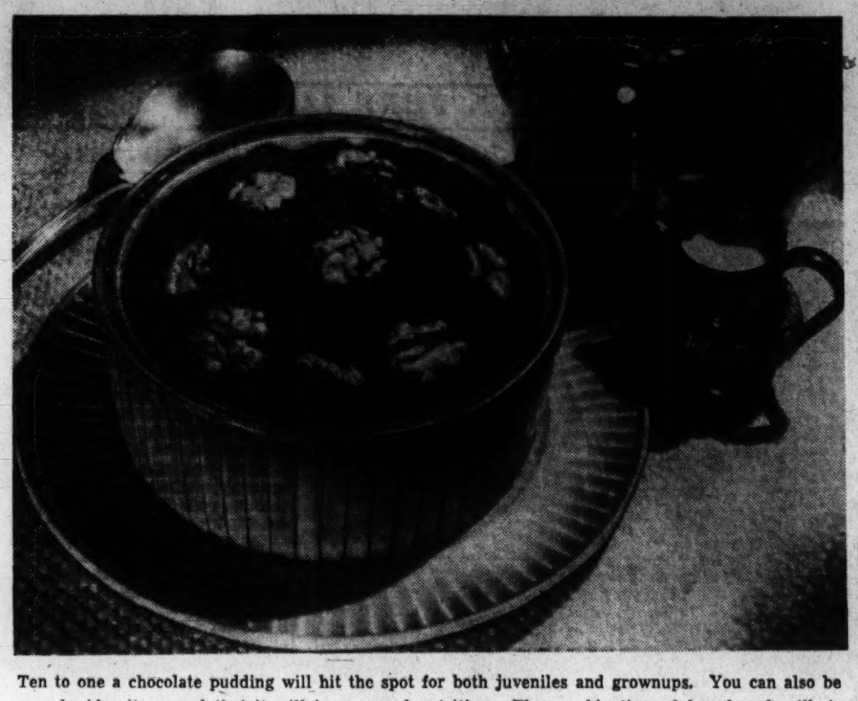
Martha Ellyn's Platter Chatter



Ten to one a chocolate pudding will hit the spot for both juveniles and grownups. You can also be sure besides its appeal that it will insure good nutrition. The combination of bread and milk is always dependable. The recipe for this nutritious pudding is given on this page

The theory that the proof of the pudding is in the eating will be carried out in true fashion if you make a Chocolate Nut Pudding. Even on those hot days it won't be a difficult food to make, for it takes little doing.

Martha Ellyn

Most every bread box will yield some pieces of bread that can well be utilized in such a dessert. Of course if you make sure that you are using enriched white bread you will know that you are getting excellent nutrition as well as par excellence in flavor and appeal.

What to serve with the pudding? Well since the temperature is soaring try and cook cool. Cold cuts are the cook's friend. Make some potato salad, for it will be appreciated since this favorite vegetable has been long absent. Here's my suggested menu:

Dinner Menu

Jellied consomme
Crisp wafers — Radishes
Cold cuts — Potato salad
Whole wheat rolls
Chocolate pudding — Iced tea

Here is the recipe for the Chocolate Nut Pudding. Eat with milk or cream according to the consideration your waist line needs.

BAKED CHOCOLATE NUT PUDDING

Mix 1-3 cup cocoa, ½ cup sugar and ½ teaspoon ginger, ¼ teaspoon allspice and ½ teaspoon salt. Add to 1 beaten egg, ½ cup corn syrup and 2 cups milk. Add 12 slices enriched white bread, cubed, ½ cup chopped nut meats, and 1 teaspoon vanilla extract and pour into buttered baking dish. Bake in moderate oven 350 degrees, for one hour. Garnish top with nut meats. Serves 6.

Your Figure, Madame!

"Don't forget about us fat folks. There are a lot of other things to write about these days, but, rationing and all, we are still fat!"

So many of your letters are being written to that tune that I want to give you an exercise that is guaranteed to reduce you. If you will take it three times a day, you can have a junior miss waistline and hips slim enough for slacks. The timing is what counts. You don't have to be a strong woman to do it. Here it is:

Position: Sitting in your chair at the table, feet on floor.

Movement: Place both hands firmly against the edge of the table, call on your will power, push away from the table, rise, and walk off quickly!

Once is enough for that exercise, but you have to do it three meals a day, before you take any second helpings or get around to the rich dessert. By that simple expedient you can lose four pounds a month.

If that is not fast enough for you and you want to make real headway, cut down slightly on the first helpings. Don't cut down on all food, just on the fatteners.

When you eat in a restaurant, there is one pitfall to look out for even before you order. This is the custom of bringing on the bread and water to keep the customer quiet while the waiter finishes with other tables. By the time he takes your order, you may have had several hundred calories in bread. Maybe that's how the term "bread basket" originated.

You can have the first course and the second—a fresh fruit cup or seafood, and a tomato bisque or a nice, tasty, low-calorie bouillon. A hot bouillon, for almost no calories, is a great comfort to anyone on restricted rations.

You can have your full share of meat and even a potato, when you can get it. But leave off the gravy. It is swimming in calories. Have a double portion of the green vegetables, which are full of iron and shy on calories, and eat all the salad, but go easy on the dressing.

Dessert usually is loaded with calories and gives you very scant protection as far as the essentials go. It's a good idea to leave the table before you even catch sight of it, or else have fresh fruit.

There is the exercise technique that will let you reduce. As you can see, it takes more will power than anything else. But if you will repeat it 52 times in the next two weeks—once at each of your three meals a day—you won't crave the second helpings and desserts. You will begin to lose weight automatically.

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Every baby should have new foods offered some time around the second month of life. It then depends upon the baby how quickly these new foods can be added and in what amounts. While all the foods described in the following letter are suitable to the young baby, the mother is quite right when she surmises not all babies get them and I may add—nor could all digest them.

Mrs. C. D. wonders if what she is doing is completely ordinary. "My baby is 3 months and 12 days old. He is growing and thriving like a weed. When he was one month old he cut out his 2 a. m. feeding all by himself. Now he no longer is interested in the 10 p. m. one. He just doesn't want it.

"He takes six to eight ounces of evaporated milk, half water, plus a malt powder, four times a day. He also takes five tablespoons of prepared cereal with part of his milk on it, one egg yolk, one-half can of prepared vegetables, the juice of one orange and one drop of concentrated Vitamin D.

"He goes to bed without rocking or bottle-sucking. He sleeps 9 to 9½ hours without waking. He naps one-half hour after his early feeding and 3 hours later in the day and 15 or 20 minutes toward evening. He is a happy, good-natured baby with just enough temper to let me know that he isn't going to be dull.

"He has held his head up since his second day and for two months he has been able to manage this indefinitely. He will play quietly in his crib with a rattle or coo and kick for long periods. He is really a joy. I hope I haven't bored you. Maybe his routine is just an ordinary one."

Far from it. It is about the usual one for a baby twice his age.

One must warn mothers that too rapid inclusion of new foods in the diet of so young a baby might result in eczema, or stomach upsets. The capacity of any individual baby to digest new foods is a personal one and one cannot lay down rules and regulations which fit all of them.

Obviously, since everything is going so beautifully I would continue as you are doing. Your baby seems exceptional in more than his digestive capacities; his ability to hold a rattle, not usually mastered quite this early, his support of his head, all indicate that he is an unusually strong, smart baby. Be glad that he is.

The Fusion Ticket

Mrs. Bellwether—Now with so much fighting going on in the world, we don't want an election fight this year. We must have a president who will please all factions.

Mrs. Joyner—I know the very woman—Mrs. Aspen.

Mrs. Driver—Aspen? . . . Aspen? . . .

Mrs. Joyner—Mrs. Chameleon Aspen—you know—well I just can't describe her, but she always comes to business meetings.

Mrs. Bellwether—She's a very nice little woman. And she hasn't been in the club long enough to make any enemies. Besides, she will make a very good appearance at the annual luncheon.

Mrs. Driver—Will Ethel Puma accept her?

Mrs. Joyner—Yes, and so will Mrs. Catnip. I've talked to them both.

Mrs. Bellwether—Now we'll need a strong first vice president.

Mrs. Driver—We'd better give that to the Puma crowd. They can make the most noise if they're not satisfied.

Mrs. Belwether—Do they have anybody who is not—or, well, too strong minded?

Mrs. Driver—Mabel Doodle is very agreeable—and she even has some friends in the Catnip faction.

Mrs. Bellwether—Fine! Now then shouldn't we give the second vice presidency to one of the newcomers?

Mrs. Joyner—But the newcomers always have to start with the secretaryships.

Mrs. Driver—There's nothing to do as second vice president and you can't offend anybody. Let's give it to Mrs. Chipp. She's always complaining that a little clique gets all the offices.

Mrs. Joyner—Which faction does she belong to?

Mrs. Driver—She's mad at them both.

Mrs. Bellwether—Then she'll be ideal for second vice president. Now what about recording secretary?

Mrs. Joyner—Let's put one of the young and pretty members in there.

Mrs. Driver—But the old and ugly—I mean the older members are so much more dependable.

Mrs. Bellwether—Suppose we take one of the younger members who is—er plain enough to be dependable and who hasn't gotten identified with any faction yet.

Mrs. Joyner—I suggest Mrs. Lucius Lavender. She's a very neat dresser and will always look well up in front.

Mrs. Bellwether—Now then, corresponding secretary.

Mrs. Driver—We've got to give something to the Catnip faction.

Mrs. Belwether — Let's give them treasurer and sergeant at arms. That will add up to the Puma crowd's first vice presidency.

Mrs. Joyner—Fine. I suggest Mrs. Dartwood Diddle for treasurer and Mrs. Tiffany Treacle for sergeant at arms. They both belong to the Catnip faction, but I understand don't get along so well with Mrs. Catnip.

Mrs. Bellwether—They'll be ideal. Now what about the corresponding secretary?

Mrs. Joyner—Why not give that to one of the pretty young girls?

Mrs. Bellwether—But we have to have someone who will at least send out the notices.

Mrs. Driver—I tell you! Mrs. Rush! She's wonderfully capable. And tied up with no faction.

Mrs. Joyner—I know, but for years we've been trying to get her to do something, and she won't even serve on a committee.

Mrs. Driver—Just leave her to me! I'll get her on the phone tonight.

Mrs. Bellwether — Now we come to the board members—

Mrs. Joyner—Wait! We haven't done anything about the young and pretty members.

Mrs. Driver—I have it! Let's have an assistant to the recording secretary who can sit up front and look pretty. Somebody like Mrs. Pontius Prean.

Mrs. Joyner—Yes, and it won't matter whether she does anything or not.

Mrs. Bellwether—Now then, we'll need three board members.

Mrs. Joyner—Since we haven't done anything for the old and ugly—I mean the older members who are sort of out of things, let's put Mrs. Mollusk on the board.

Mrs. Driver — She's rather strong minded.

Mrs. Joyner—We can balance that. Let's put Mrs. Gimlet from the Puma group and Mrs. Calliope from the Catnips on with her.

Mrs. Bellwether—Fine! Then we ought to have a nice peaceful year. We have a regular United Nations ticket!

Letters Men in Service Like to Receive From Home

The Office of War Information offers these pointers for homefolks writing to soldiers, sailors, and marines—based on suggestions gathered in a survey among servicemen at home and overseas, in cooperation with the Special Service Division of the Army Service Forces:

Tell him:

How the family is doing everything possible to help in the war.

How anxious the family is for the boy's return.

How the family is getting along financially.

What's doing in the community—news about girls (single) he knows, doings of friends who's marrying whom, exploits of the home team and other sports events, social doings, effects of the war on the home town. Reminisce a little about past events and places the boy used to visit. Enclose clippings from the hometown paper.

Don't tell him:

Your complaints. He can't do anything about them.

About things you are deprived of. He can't supply them.

Doleful predictions about the future. He's fighting for that future—now.

Unneccessary details about financial troubles. If there are things he should know about family finances, and he is in a position to do something about the situation, tell him. But don't string it out.

President of Chinese Women's College Makes Postwar Plans for Winter of 1944

Dr. Wu Yi-Fang To Speak at Constitution Hall

By Patricia Grady

"We would rather be a shattered piece of jade than a whole tile."

Thus does Dr. Wu Yi-Fang, outstanding educational leader of China, use one of her country's pithy proverbs to explain why China, no matter what the odds, will never make a separate peace with Japan.

Dr. Wu, who is in Washington to address the meeting of the "United Nations Today and Tomorrow," lectures at Constitution Hall tonight, flew in seven weeks ago from Chengtu, where Ginling College fled when the Japs entered Nanking. As President of this famous Chinese women's college and a member of the Peoples Political Council, Dr. Wu is rated as one of the five greatest women leaders in China today.

The long, slender lines of her Chinese dresses give height to her small stature and her simple drawn-back coiffure accentuates the intenseness of her unrouged face. Speaking superb English—she won her master's degree and Doctorate of Philosophy from the University of Michigan—Dr. Wu talks like both an academic and an emotionalist. When she discusses the postwar in China, her comments are detached, sure and objective. When she talks of the Japs, in China or at Pearl Harbor, her words tumble out in excited torrents.

DR. WU YI-FANG

China to Be 'Great Power'

Dr. Wu's burning intest now is in postwar planning, and she is in this country for conferences with other United Nations Leaders on the subject as well as to lay after-the-war plans for Gingling College with the Interdenominational Mission in New York, which supports her school. She is at present making her plans on the theory that the war in the Pacific will be over in the winter of 1944. Many leading Chinese consider that to be the war-end date, according to Dr. Wu, who does not implement her guess with military strategies.

This forthright woman, who is willing to answer questions about anything and everything and has apparently never heard of the "off-the-record" dodge, feels optimistic about postwar China. She points out that it will take intelligent planning to rehabilitate her country after the social and economic uprootings of these years of war, but that it can be done and that it must be done.

Education All Important

"China wants to live up to her responsibilities as one of the world's great powers," she stresses. "And to do this we must be industrialized. Already the war has introduced many industrial changes in China, but the job of putting China on a sound industrial basis is ahead of us."

Education, she feels, must, of course, be a large factor in putting her country on its feet. She speaks particularly of adult education and the broadening of primary education. China has been through a shattering war experience, but it has not all been wasted. China has learned a great deal, knows now what lies ahead of it.

First Chinese To Head College

Since her last trip to the United States several years before the war, Dr. Wu feels that many changes have taken place in our international psychology. "The last time I was here," she explains, "your people showed wonderful friendship for China—based on emotion. Now they show even greater friendship and interest—based on an understanding of the place of the United States in international society."

Dr. Wu entered Gingling College, founded in 1915, as a member of its first class and was one of the five members of its first graduating class. Following her graduation she went to the National Peking Normal College for Women, where she was head of the English department. Then, in 1923, she came to the University of Michigan to study for her master's degree and Ph. D. At this time her interest was in biology and her doctorate thesis was written on a complicated scientific subject.

But fate stepped in to change the science career of Dr. Wu when the Chinese government in 1927 decreed that all educational institutions in China must be under the leadership of Chinese. The president of Gingling College had until that time been an American. Dr. Wu was selected to take her place.

As president of one of the outstanding Christian institutions in China, Dr. Wu has been active in the political, educational and religious movements of her country. As a member of many international bodies, she has become known throughout the world for her leadership. An excellent presiding officer, she is one of the five leaders of the People's Political Council and has presided over its sessions since 1941.

War Brings New Jobs

Among her international accomplishments have been her attendance in London of meetings of the executive committee of the International Missionary Council, her heading of the Chinese delegation to the International Missionary Conference at Madras in 1938 and her chairmanship of the National Christian Council in China.

The war has brought her added responsibilities as a member of the executive committee of the women's committee of the New Life Movement. She has done a great deal of work for refuge children and with the Chinese industrial cooperatives, and is vice chairman of the Chinese-American Cultural Relations Association in Chungking.

Latin Folk Dances Tell A Story

Washington's Diplomatic Corps, members of the Cabinet and other Government executives, congressional representatives, Army and Navy officials, and special guests, numbering about 2000 have been sent invitations to the Latin American Folk Festival of the Pan American Union for Thursday evening, June 24. The invitations are issued by Dr. L. S. Rowe, director general of the Union, and Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director.

The affair will be the first outdoor summer entertainment of the Union, and in addition to presenting many of the native folk dances and customs of Latin America, it will also include a climax typical folk numbers of the United States—spirituals, cowboy songs, and a square dance.

All of the folk dances of the Latin American countries which will be presented are deep rooted in the tradition and customs of the Southern republics. The date of the festival, for instance, is especially significant for Washington Peruvians, for on June 24, Lima, Peru's capital, goes "all out" for a very popular festival, "The Fiesta de Amancaes," on St. John's Day, in which the lively steps of "La Marinera" and its many-versed accompaniment have formed a colorful event since Colonial days.

Some of the Capital's Peruvians who dance "La Marinera" describe it as a delightful exhibition of combined coquetry and modesty on the part of the picturesquely costumed dancers. The handkerchief is used expressively as the man glides toward his partner, holding the kerchief high, signifying boldness. The girl advances coquettishly, the lover loses his bravado, and the handkerchief flutters low. The man then sings melancholy Indian love songs, as the girl becomes more confident in the lively steps of the dance, which climaxes with the kerchief of the lover again being raised boastfully.

'Information, Please' Is What Thousands Want in Washington; They Get It, Too

U. S. Bureau Answers Questions On Every Subject

By Martha Rhyne

"Information, please." Few words are more often used in Washington than these. For the Capital City is filled to the boundaries with perplexed, tired, baffled persons who are either just arriving, striving to adjust themselves here on a temporarily permanent basis, or trying to leave. And they have a lot of questions to ask.

Beneath the life-size lettering, "U. S. Information," over a temporary building located between Fourteenth and Fifteenth Streets on Pennsylvania Avenue pass more inquisitive people than the most successful question-and-answers man could hope for in his dream audience. But they're dead serious with their problems and they want an answer, which they usually get from Malcolm Morrow, chief of the Bureau of Public Inquiry, or from his staff of assistants.

As a conservative estimate, Mr. Morrow places the number of questions asked at about 4000 a day, 1500 of which come by telephone. Another portion come through the mails, and the remainder come in person.

Endless Circle Of Agencies

Outside Washington, the Federal Government is thought of as a singular organization which inhabits Washington, D. C. Inside Washington knows it as an endless circle of agencies, bureaus, commission, and branches. For outsiders and insiders, then, there had to be a central information center established. Running true to form, the agency has neither its original function for title left after 10 years of life but remains fundamentally a clearing house for questions concerning the inner workings of the Federal Government.

Into the telephone room I went to find the source of some several answers to my own questions, answered from time to time by the telephone girls of U. S. I. In the reference and record sections, the library, the distribution centers and store rooms, I found literally thousands of Government publications, press releases, posters, copies of current wartime regulations.

'Where Is My Ration Board?'

So vast is the function of the organization that it is difficult for the staff themselves to break it down in outline form. But the most fascinating feature of the entire set-up is the questions themselves.

"I live on Thirty-ninth Street. Where is my rationing board?" "I have three registered, pedigreed, thoroughbred female German shepherd puppies. Can they be used in armed forces?" "I'm in the Pentagon building on the fifth floor. I have an appointment in an office on the third floor. War Department Information has transferred my call to you. How do I get to the third floor?" "Am I qualified to join the WAVES?" "I'm in Agriculture and am trying to contact a Miss Smith, connected in some way with housing. No, I don't know her first name. That's what I want you to tell me!"

Queries Come by Mail, Telephone And 'In Person'

Letters pour in from every section of the country—carrying inquiries of the sincere, involved, and screwball varieties. An Italian national wants to import goods for his business from South America. A small business man must have copies of certain regulations of OPA, his interpretation and execution of these orders meaning the difference between financial life and death for him.

And from the servicemen and women come all sorts of queries. "Where am I going to sleep?" "Where can I get a good dinner?" "Where can I meet a nice girl and dance?" "Where can I get money to get back to camp? I've lost my wallet."

Plenty of $64 Questions

And then there's always the $64 question. Two servicemen had been using one car to go to work. Then the owner of the car had been ordered out of Washington temporarily. The question was, "Can a serviceman living in Maryland, having a New York driver's permit, use a car with a Missouri license to drive to the District of Columbia?"

The life of U. S. Information workers is not easy. Perseverence, resourcefulness, courage, ability and initiative are only a few of the requisites for employes of this office, now under the Office of War Information. Without a keen sense of humor and human understanding it couldn't exist.

Miss Knowlson To Be Bride of Lieut. Edwards

Mr. and Mrs. James Somerville Knowlson of Hinsdale, Ill., announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Walter A. Edwards, lieutenant (j. g.), United States Naval Reserve.

Miss Knowlson is a graduate of the Emma Willard School and completed her education at Sweet Briar College and the University of Chicago. She made her debut in 1938 at the Oak Brook Polo Club in Hinsdale and for the last two years has made her home with her parents in Washington, where she is a member of the Junior League.

Lieutenant Edwards is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Edwards of Logansport, Ind. Since his graduation from the University of Indiana in 1937, and prior to his entering the service, he was associated with the Pullman-Standard Car Manufacturing Co. He is at present stationed in New York City.

Marjory Logan Is Recent Bride

The marriage of Miss Marjory Logan to Herbert R. Franklin took place June 7 in the Court of the Founders, All Souls Church. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kirk H. Logan of this city and Mr. Franklin is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Abner Franklin of Amherst, Va.

Officiating at the ceremony was the Rev. U. G. B. Pierce. The bride wore a rose colored suit with navy accessories and white orchid corsage. She was given in marriage by her father and was attended by her sister, Miss Polly Logan. Dr. Elbert Dodd served as best man.

Miss Jean Bowman Becomes Bride of Vernon R. Gingell in Rites Here

Before an altar banked with white bridal flowers and palms, Miss Jean Elizabeth Bowman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Bowman of this city, became the bride yesterday afternoon of Vernon Ragon Gingell, son of F. V. Gingell of Washington. The Rev. Calvin H. Wingert officiated at the 3 o'clock ceremony.

The bride, who was given in marriage by he father, wore a white satin gown made with a sweetheart neckline, long pointed sleeves and a full skirt with lace panels extending into a lace-edged train. Her finger-tip illusion veil fell from a tiara of orange blossoms and pearls and she carried a bouquet of white rose buds and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor was Miss Anna Belle Snyder, cousin of the bride, and the bridesmaids were Miss Anna Mae Bowman, a sister of the bride, and Miss Cornelia Walter. Melvin Leonberger served as best man and the ushers were Richard Mann and Robert White.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents.

Poems by Mrs. Elizabeth Osgood Give Praise to British People

By Betty Ruth McDevitt

Wartime activities may have slowed down the writing of Mrs. Elizabeth S. Osgood, well-known poetess, but not enough to hinder her talent for verse without a touch of the present world atmosphere.

In the little time Mrs. Osgood has left after her Victory Garden chores at "Knollwood," her Kensington Heights, Md., home, caring for her three grandchildren and making surgical dressings for the Red Cross, she refused to let her friends in the Women's Community Club of Kensington down. Result—she captured first prize for poetry in the annual contests conducted by the Maryland State Federation of Women's Clubs. Her "Mesage to England" was selected from approximately 50 entries of poems. Mrs. Osgood, who is chairman of the art appreciation section for the Women's Community Club of Kensington, made her entry in the latter's name.

Here is the prize winning poem expected to appear in this month's issue of the Maryland Clubwoman.

Land of our kindred race and mother tongue,
Hold close that love all loyalties remand
In these dark days, with woes on every hand,
Our sons arise, with spirits strong and young,
To give themselves, their hopes, their dreams among
The sacrifices such grim foes demand
In that once fair and happy meadowland,
Where Shelley soared, unrivaled Shakespeare sung.

Away with darkness. Hasten, Brighter Day!—
When freemen, all shall greet Gods' rising sun
In simple sunlight, flooding pane and floor;
When no more in agony need pray
For food and shelter, when the day is done,
Peace for the budding trees, Peace at the door.

Still another poem soon to reach the public is "Concerning Coventry," the title of a book of poems written by Mrs. Osgood and now ready for publication.

How bravely England rises from the dust
Of sacrificed fires, and still will rise
In spite of every sacrifice
In past, in present, future, for she must—
It is her will and destiny! No rust
Shall ever blunt her sword, no worthy prize
Torn from her grasp, but shall be counterwise,
Held for posterity in sacred trust.

Lo, even from this present dawn, we see
Horizons brighten, lighting future years—
Accepting fate, not halting to ask why:
Rebuilding out of chaos, Coventry—
Emerging, out of agony and tears,
Its spires reaching toward a sunnier sky.

This will be Mrs. Osgood's second book of poems, her first, River Songs," having been published in 1941. Actually she became known to Washingtonians for her poems in 1932 when a bicentennial booklet, "Sketches of Washington," describing places in the Nation's Capital, was published. As a child she would dream and scribble off lines but kept them hidden until a few year ago.

Clustered among many trees, "Knollwood," Mrs. Osgood says, gives her inspiration to write. A few hundred feet away is the home of her daughter, Mrs. Graydon Bowman, whose three children take up much of the author's time.

Mrs. Osgood is past president of the D. C. American Poetry Circle. She founded and was president of the Chevy Chase branch of the Circle for two years, serving as assistant editor of the Circle Magazine and editor of the Year Book Anthology in 1935.

United Nations Fete Is Held at British Embassy

In a colorful fete reminiscent of the garden party for King George and Queen Elizabeth, the British Embassy played host yesterday at a prebirthday celebration for the United Nations Club which marks its first anniversary next Sunday. With His Britannic Majesty's Ambassador Lord Halifax, accompaned by Lady Halifax, on hand late in the afternoon to greet the guests, the occasion was the first time the Embassy had thrown open its gates to an outside group.

Nearly 1000 members and their guests took advantage of the club's invitation to throng about the swimming pool, play tennis and dance on the terrace in the evening. A buffet supper was served in the gardens at 6 o'clock.

The Embassy's turning over its recreational facilities for the first time to the United Nations Club was a tribute to this organization which, in only a year, has done so much to strengthen the bonds of friendship between representatives of the Allied nations in Washington.

Basis of Prosperity

By Roger W. Babson

Economist Explains Real Wealth

In a recent article, I brought out the point that, under our capitalistic system, the middleman is in the best position to weather the inflation storm. I also stated that the farmers and wage workers might be obliged in the end to be responsible for the greater portion of our national debt. However, debt and inflation are not the only troubles we may have to face. The possibilities of a long war, of radical changes in our social order and other contingencies may ultimately result in real trouble. If such should come, how can we or our children be protected?

ROGER W. BABSON

The United States is almost the only Nation in the world in which securities representing capital have not yet been confiscated. I do not believe that I or my children or my grandchildren will live to see this happen here. I do believe that perhaps my great-grandchildren, if they are lucky or unlucky enough to inherit anything from me, may live in a time when they must work in order to eat. In other words, perhaps I should do more for my present and ultimate heirs by forcing them to work than by leaving them rents to collect or coupons to cut.

I was brought up on a farm and my work has brought me in close touch with many farmers and their problems. Furthermore, as an economist, I recognize that land, children and character are our only real wealth. As in the case of securities, however, the value of land and children or the income they may produce is subject to change.

The Astor family fortune of many millions was derived from New York City real estate. It is illustrative of the growth possibilities characteristic of well-located or productive land held through several generations. Yet, while this particular fortune was growing, many land speculators, along with security speculators, lost large sums.

Without some real work being done, neither the owners of stocks nor the owners of land make money in the long run. There is no easy road to prosperity. For example, before buying any considerable amount of a stock or a bond issue, I take certain fundamental steps. These consist of visiting the plant or officers of the company whose securities interest me. I meet the officers and determine whether the management is capable and progressive. I also try to obtain stockholders' lists to see who my future associates in ownership will be. Figures relative to earnings, dividends and interest, production or sales are easily obtainable; but it may take days and months of travel interviewing and investigating before hidden values in any investment situation may be uncovered.

Likewise, the real value of land or other forms of real estate, such as stores, office buildings, farms, acreage, homes or subdivisions can be determined only after consideration of location, soil analysis, weather records, population trends and other factors. One should devote considerable time to personal investigation before exchanging one form of investment for another or before making any investment of consequence. I might be in a position to make a large investment in farm land, but in doing so I would de dependent upon someone else to work the land and even to supervise the job. In other words, I would be simply an absentee owner.

This is another reason why I have confined my investment to securities. But for the man who will study land values, who can get out upon his property, roll up his sleeves and go to work—then, and only then, do I say, "Go back to the land!" Of course, the ownership of other types of real property also requires personal attention.

Certainly the last thing that will be taken away from my children or grandchildren will be their homestead and their skill. Under the communistic system Russia redistributed her land in the form of co-operative farms; but in that country the situation was quite different from anything that we have experienced here. In Russia and in Poland, too, the great bulk of land was held by very large estates individually owned or controlled. It may have been entirely proper to have the use of such land redistributed among the people. Such a situation does not exist here. Even if our national debt reaches a point where confiscation of some securities might become necessary in order to reduce it, the homestead of 40 acres or less should not be disturbed.

Really, the men and women who are trained for some real job may, in the end, be the best off. Consider again the middlemen. They care little whether the goods which they sell are manufactured in the United States or some foreign land; they really pay little or no taxes. I repeat that they are a favored class under the capitalistic system.

If, however, our capitalistic system should ever break down and the farmers and wage workers get in control, these middlemen might be subject to terrific persecution. Hence, for temporary benefits, be a middleman; but for long-pull security be an expert farmer, machinist, engineer or chemist. And for that matter, the professions, also, offer opportunities.

The important thing is that our children and grandchildren be brought up to expect less rather than more from their parents and their grandparents, that they be taught that real wealth can come only through their ability to do better than anyone else in their community some honest, useful, technical or professional work.

Veteran Tells Of Action in Europe, Africa

An Australian veteran—22, slender and small in statue—who left an eye and a hand in North Africa—who was 18 when he fled the beaches of Dunkerque, sat in a Washington hotel yesterday and told his story.

William Mathew, of Darwin, Australia, veteran of Dunkerque, Malaya and of two campaigns in North Africa held his stout cane ready to ease the pain of his walking on his shrapnel riddled right leg.

A simple story it is.

Just the story of a boy from "Down Under" who went into the British Army just before the battle of Dunkerque at the age of 18.

Of that horror he had not much to say for that was two years ago—and history.

Dad's A Sergeant

He told briefly of his father who is now a sergeant in the Australian Army fighting in New Guinea. He told of the brother who is now flying a plane in Australia's air corps, and mentioned softly, but prodly, the seven Japs "Jack" has shot from the skies.

He told of the sister who is a nurse with the Australian Army Nursing Corps who has fallen in love with a "Yank"—wounded, and under her charge in a hospital Down Under.

He told of the anger of his infantry-loving father over Jack's entering the air corps—of how the older man refused to even speak to the "renegade"—and then he told of the pride of that father when the exploits of the flying son were revealed.

Won't Talk of Wounds

These things he told.

But, he shied away, gently and courteously, when asked about his own wounds.

Of these he would say simply that he was with a group of the British Eighth Army that tried to stop a German Mark VI tank out of Tripoli last December. A spasm of pain momentarily twisted his clean cut young face. But the smile soon righted itself and he almost looked the boyishness of his years again.

"As you Yanks say, we just didn't have what it takes, then," he explained.

And the burst of shrapnel?

Visiting Cousin Here

Well, of course he didn't know, but at any rate he was now recuperating in the States and hoped soon to go to his native Australia. While here he is visiting a cousin—who is most British—and who would not like to have his name in the papers.

After Dunkirk the boy, who was with the Ninth Australian Regiment, went to North Africa but after the Japs went on the rampage in hte Pacific, he and his fellow soldiers were sent to Malaya. There he encountered some Japanese troops, but not many, he said. Then he was sent back to North Africa.

And now they are sending him home "Down Under," where he will be able to see his mother in the intervals she can spare from her war work.

Of America he thinks the women are beautiful, but that the people of the country do not yet realize what war is—and maybe he should know.

Service Flag Presented to Baptist Home

Officials and other friends of the District Baptist Home for Children in Bethesda yesterday helped dedicate a service flag for 21 of their former charges now in the armed forces.

One gold star memorializes Lieut. Kenneth Guthridge, United States Marines, who died in an airplane crash last May 23 at Daytona Beach.

Dr. Edward Hughes Pruden, pastor of First Baptist Church, Washington, and former Federation of Churches' president, delivered the main address, and Mrs. E. Hilton Jackson, former president of the home's board of managers, called the roll of honor and sketched the lives of the lads now grown to manhood.

The service flag was presented to the home by Mrs. J. Robert Hardesty, chairman of the Bible committee, board of managers.

Represented on the flag were Lieut. William S. Seibert, Sergt. Richard C. Goodson, Corpls. Jack Clark and Charles R. Colvin, Pvts. Randolph C. Colvin, Charles Hodgkin, Robert Lee Russell, Robert Simmons and John S. Suddath, Peter Panagoupolos and Milton Boswell and Aviation Cadet Donald Simmons, all United States Army; the late Lieutenant Guthridge and Corpl. Leroy C. Bladen, Marine Corps; Boyce Guthridge, brother of Kenneth, and Lee McDonald, both of the Coast Guard, and Paul McDonald, who soon will be inducted into the Army, and James Cortvrindt, William Langley, jr., Arthur Reed and William G. Strozier, in the Navy.

Pedestrian Safety Week Begins Today

Pedestrian Safety Week, sponsored by the Junior Board of Commerce, will begin officially this morning at 8:15 with a short radio address by Maj. Edward J. Kelly, superintendent of Metropolitan Police, over radio station WMAL.

Planned as an educational program to combat increasing pedestrian carelessness and indorsed by the District Commissioners and other civic leaders, Safety Week will be highlighted by five-minute radio talks every morning at 8:15 over WMAL. Included in the list of speakers are Traffic Director William A. VanDuzer, Edward D. Merrill, general manager of the Capital Transit Co., Inspector Arthur E. Miller, in charge of the traffic bureau, Metropolitan Police Department, and Howard F. Wentworth.

Posters have been distributed to Government agency offices and are displayed on 300 streetcars to draw the attention of District warworkers to the fact that "careless walking helps Hitler."

Pedestrian carelessness has been shown in recent traffic statistics to be the cause for an overwhelming majority of accidents.

United Nations Books Listed By Library

A comprehensive book list comprising the names of books and pamphlets on all of the United Nations has recently been published and is available at the Washington Public Library and all of its branches according to an announcement made yesterday.

The list, which records 300 books and pamphlets, was composed by the staff of the Washington Public Library and published by the American Public Library Association. Library officials said the publication of the list is in connection with the celebration of Flag Day today and Bastille Day July 14.

Miss Clara W. Herbert, Washington librarian, said the list had provoked widespread favorable comment and recommended it be used as a reference guide for all persons who seek to better understand the postwar world. She paid special tribute to the staff of the public library, the Library of Congress, the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs, the Pan-American Union and the American Council of Education for their assistance in compiling the list.

Farley Defends Russia as Ally

Meriden, Conn., June 13 (AP).—James A. Farley said today the "obligation" of all the Allies to prevent aggression in the postwar world should allay the fears of those who suspect "the ultimate aims of our Russian ally."

Terming labor organizations "a contribution to a better society," the former Postmaster General declared in a Flag Day address here:

"It is contended that certain sections of American labor, as well as various political operators, are under control of that ally (Russia), and interested in subverting the American system. ... I do not think it becomes an American to fear that his country is incapable of protecting its interests when dealing with a foreign power, enemy or ally."

Rubber Outlook Held Promising

Rubber Director William M. Jeffers said yesterday the Nation's synthetic rubber plants will turn out 275,000 tons in 1943 and that by fall of 1944, barring major setbacks, "we can safely forget the rubber problem so far as essential supply is concerned."

He placed in the essential category military and lend-lease requirements and transportation of farmers, produce and war workers.

"The big problems ahead are the facilities, equipment and manpower to process rubber into essential products," Jeffers said in a Blue Network forum, "Washington Reports on Rationing."

Downpour Delays Circus Tent, But Big Show Will Open Today

The "big top" of Ringling Brothers and Barnum & Bailey Circus failed to go up as per schedule last night when a sudden thunder shower drowned out the circus lot at Bennings Road and Oklahoma Avenue Northeast.

Great floods of water poured over the "made land and the trench which had been dug for the power plant cable became a lake.

Other tents in the process of erection were delayed by the deluge which came shortly after 6 p. m.

Another tent affected was the huge cook tent which filled with circus employes who sought shelter from the rain and got around to dining at the same time. The animals also were fed at that time to help quiet their fear.

Most of the performers took Sunday off and spent the day in the hot compartments of the circus train, parked on a siding under the Benning Road Bridge. There, as the Washington locals from the North thundered by, they washed clothes, indulged in the rare performer's pleasure of having a few drinks, or just sat.

The "Big Top" will go up today and the initial show for the benefit of the war bond division of the Treasury Department will go on at 2:15 p. m., with an evening performance at 8:15 p. m. The war bond shows are expected to net the Treasury $1,500,000.

Regular performances will start at 2:15 tomorrow and continue through the week.

F. W. Powell, 62, Dies; Funeral Rites Tomorrow

Funeral services for Fred Wilbur Powell, 62, senior staff assistant of the Brookings Institution, will be held tomorrow at 1 p. m. at Gawler's funeral home. Interment will be at Rock Creek Cemetery.

Powell, whose home is at 3705 McKinley Street, Chevy Chase, died Saturday after a long illness. Since 1920 he had been connected with the Institute of Government Research, which was incorporated in the Brookings Institution in 1928.

Before 1920, Mr. Powell was chief of the European division, United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. He was author of several books on American railroads and different economic subjects.

Surviving are his wife, the former Mary Kenneth Maner, of Atlanta, Ga.; a son, Rowland, and a brother, Elmer Powell of Massachusetts.

Grain Car Shortage Foreseen in Harvest

Topeka, June 13 (AP).—Much of America's half-billion bushel 1943 wheat crop may have to be piled on the ground during the harvest rush because of grain car shortage, the Santa Fe Railway forecast today.

Surplus equipment formerly allotted wheat shipments "simply does not exist this year and the 1943 crop must remain in local storage until its movement to terminals or mills becomes a wartime necessity," the report stated.

Youth Missing From Long Island Is Sought Here

Their missing son, Wilfred Sidney Youngberg, 15, was sought yesterday by Mr. and Mrs. E. Youngberg of 59 Lutz Drive, Valley Stream, Long Island, N. Y., whose last communication from the boy was postmarked from Washington, May 25.

YOUNGBERG

The youth had left home May 21, while his mother was ill with a broken leg and, his father said, "needed him most." He is 5 feet 9 inches tall, weighs 130 pounds and has blue eyes, brown hair and a fair complexion. At the time of his disappearance he wore gray trousers, white shirt, blue jacket, brown shoes, blue and gray reversible coat but no hat.

Strikers Return to Work While Officials Bargain

Houston, Tex., June 13 (AP).—Employes of the Shell refinery at Deer Park went back to work today after company and union officials agreed to arbitrate a dispute over discharge of a worker.

The big plant, manufacturing aviation gasoline and other war products, had been idle two days. The 1200-employe walkout began at 8 a. m. Friday.

Takoma Park To Celebrate Fourth of July

Although somewhat curtailed because of the war, the annual Independence Day celebration in Takoma Park, Md., will be held. The decision follows considerable discussion at various meetings of the committee.

An annual event of the community for many years, the program this year will consist of athletic events, on Saturday, July 3, at the Whittier Street playground, a dance from 9 until 12 o'clock for the younger set the same day, and patriotic exercises July 4 at 6 p. m. at North Takoma Park.

Citizens generally agreed, accoding to Philip W. Huck, general chairman, to eliminate the parade, a highlight which drew thousands of persons to the town every year. For the first time the fireworks display at night will be dispensed with. Since there is a sum of $90 left from solicitations covering last year's expenses no contributions will be required this year. Huck stated the dance will be given under supervision especially for the younger set on tennis courts at the Takoma Recreation Center, Third and Van Buren Streets Northwest.

Serving with Huck are J. Norman Maberry, secretary and Robert M. Lyon, treasurer.

Graduates Hear Sermon

The annual sermon to the graduating class of Sherwood High School, Sandy Spring, was delivered at the school last night by the Rev. Conrad Jordan. The Rev. William Firth assisted at the services. The class numbers 27. The commencement exercises will be held at the school tomorrow night.

Blood Donor Stations

The Montgomery County health department has announced blood donations will be received at the Silver Spring Methodist Church June 22; Takoma Park Presbyterian Church, June 25, and 8011 Old Georgetown Road, Bethesda, June 29, at 8:45 p. m. on each occasion.

Liquor Hearing Scheduled

The Montgomery County Liquor Control Board has announced a public hearing will be held at the Liquor Dispensary Building, Silver Spring, at 2 p. m., June 28, on an application of Eli Alper for a license to sell beer and light wine at Westmore, on the Rockville-Gaithersburg pike, near Rockville.

'Victory Exchange'

Washington Grove's "Victory Exchange" will open at Thompson's store, Washington Grove, Wednesday afternoon. Articles of no use to their owners will be sold to others who might like to have them. Defense stamps will be paid instead of cash and no commissions will be paid. Mrs. Wallace Muir, who conceived the idea, will be in charge. The exchange will be open every Wednesdays and Friday from 1 p. m. to 4 p. m.

Parochial Graduation

There were eight graduates at the annual commencement of St. Martin's Parochial School, Gaithersburg, held yesterday morning in St. Martin's Church. They were: Gordon Benson, Madeline Elder, Charles Gardiner, Dolores Grimm, Thomas Hohmann, John Linthicum, Harry Joe Snouffer and Gloria Stokes. Medeline Elder and Thomas Hohmann tied for highest scholastic honors. The address was by the Rev. John Twamley, pastor of St. Martin's Church, who celebrated mass preceding the exercises.

Funeral Services For R. A. Pelham To Be Tomorrow

Funeral services for Robert A. Pelham, 84, executive secretary of the American Negro Academy, will be held tomorrow at 1:30 p. m. at Metropolitan A. M. E. Church, 1518 M Street Northwest. Interment will be in Lincoln Memorial Cemetery.

A resident of Washington since 1900, Mr. Pelham died Saturday night at his home, 153 T Street Northwest. He came here from Detroit, Mich., where he worked on several papers. In Washington, he was connected with the Census Bureau until he was retired in 1929.

Surviving are his wife, and daughter, Mrs. Dorothy P. Beckley of Washington, and another daughter, Mrs. Sarah P. Speaks of New York City. His grandson, Benjamin Pelham, U. S. Army, is also surviving.

OFFICIAL NOTICES 5

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, June 9, 1943. Notice is hereby given that under authority granted in Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, authorizing the closing of streets, roads, highways and alleys in the District of Columbia, and in accordance with the provisions of an item authorizing changes in the permanent system of highways contained in D. C. Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914 (Public Act No. 435, 62nd Congress), approved March 4, 1913, as amended by an Act approved April 30, 1938 (Public Act No. 158, 69th Congress), the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the Board Room in the District Building, Washington, D. C., on MONDAY, June 28, 1943, at 10 o'clock a. m. to interested property owners to determine as to any property rights which may be affected or as to the equity, justice or advisability of closing the streets, roads and alleys, and concerning the proposed changes in the permanent system of highways, all in the District of Columbia and described as follows: 1. Closing of streets and alleys in the Fort Reno area, Northwest section, bounded by Chesapeake Street, Nebraska Avenue, Fessenden Street and Belt Road, including a transfer of jurisdiction to the Commissioners, D. C., for the widening of Chesapeake Street between De Russey and Sheridan Streets, N.W. 2. Closing of streets and old roads in Piney Branch Parkway, U. S. Reservation No. 339, in the Northwest section, which includes the closing of parts of 14th Street Road, 17th Street, Spring Road and Mt. Pleasant Street in the area west of 16th Street and south of Shepherd Street, N.W. 3. Closing of streets, roads and alleys in the Fort Stanton Park area, Southeast section, which includes the closing of parts of 16th Street, 17th Street, 18th Street, 18th Place, 19th Place, 20th Street, Butler Street, Stanton Road, W Street, Grand View Place, Harrison Place, Capitol View Place, City View Place, Naylor Road and 27th Street; and the closing of parts of alleys and old roads in this area; including a transfer of jurisdiction to the Commissioners, D. C., for a connecting street between 15th and 16th Streets through Square 5797. 4. Closing of 30th Street between Hillcrest Drive and V Place, S.E., W Place between Hillcrest Drive and 31st Street, S.E., and closing public alleys in Square 5657, including a transfer of jurisdiction to the Commissioners, D. C., for a public alley in said Square 5637. 5. Closing of the part of the public alley in Square 5637 running south from S Street, between 29th and 30th Streets, S.E. 6. Closing of the part of the public alley in Square 5351 running east from Texas Avenue, between B and C Streets, S.E. 7. Closing of 10th Place between Mississippi Avenue and Valley Avenue, S.E., abutting Squares 5931 and 5932. 8. Closing part of 10th Place, including a dedication to provide a realignment of said 10th Place, between Mississippi Avenue and Congress Street, S.E.; and closing of street area at 11th Place and Trenton Place, S.E., including a dedication to provide a street realignment at this location, and for the establishment of building restriction lines in Squares 5933, 5934, 5935 and 5936. 9. Closing of New Jersey Avenue between M and N Streets, S.E., and closing M Place, Quander Street, N Street and Francis Place, all immediately east of First Street, S.E., and closing alleys in Squares 743 and 744. 10. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways in the Northeast section, providing for a change in the location of a proposed street extending south from W Street, proposed, between Brentwood Road and 13th Street, N.E. 11. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways in the Southern section of the District of Columbia covering area bounded on the north by Atlantic Street, on the east by Livingston Road, on the south by Southern Avenue, and on the west by the westerly line of First Street, S.W., and South Capitol Street, providing for the elimination of part of First Street, S.W., proposed, and for the elimination of other proposed streets through U. S. Reservation at this location. 12. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways affecting property in the Northeast section along the line of 50th Street between Washington Place and Grant Street. Maps showing the street, road and alley areas proposed to be closed and showing the proposed changes in the permanent system of highways are on file in the office of the Surveyor, D. C., Room 403, District Building (same being known as Maps 2871, 2872, 2873, 2874, 2875, 2876, 2877, 2878, 2879, 2880, 2881 and 2882) and may be examined by interested parties during business hours prior to the hearing. Said maps will also be displayed at the hearing and the Commissioners will consider any suggestions or protests concerning the proposed changes and the proposed street, road and alley closings as shown on above-mentioned maps. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, C. W. KUTZ, GUY MASON, Commissioners of the District of Columbia. 9-24.

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Some Writer's Cramp — By Milton Caniff

I DON'T BLAME PETE FOR CUTTING A FEW SPLITS!
NO RADIO—I COULDN'T TELL YOU THAT I GOT THAT JAP PHOTO PLANE WITH THE FIRST BLAST!
WE KNEW IT—HE FLOWED IN WITHOUT CATCHING FIRE!
WHY SO WORRIED SKIPPER?
THAT NIP WAS CARRYING A PHOTOSTAT OF A MAP OF THIS BASE—
"THE MAP HAD BEEN DRAWN ON OFFICIAL U.S. NAVY STATIONERY!
YEE-IPE! I'M GLAD I'M A V-MAIL BOY MYSELF!

MARY WORTH'S FAMILY — By Dale Allen

A PRISONER ON LOU VARZONI'S HUGE CABIN CRUISER, PATTI HAS HIT UPON A PLAN TO SIGNAL FOR HELP!
THERE! NOT ROOM ENOUGH TO CRAWL THROUGH ···BUT ROOM ENOUGH TO GET AN ARM THROUGH!
NOW, IF I CAN REACH THOSE "RIDING LIGHTS"..!
··AND UNSCREW THOSE GLOBES···!
FORTUNATELY, LOU'S A LAND-LUBBER, SO HE MAY NOT NOTICE THAT HE NOW HAS HIS RED AND GREEN LIGHTS REVERSED!

MICKEY FINN — Double Talk — By Lank Leonard

MICKEY AND TOM HAVE FINALLY FOUND "HOTFOOT" HIGGINS, THE SUB'S PRIZED COOK!
SUPPOSE HE DOESN'T WANT TO GO BACK ABOARD WITH US, TOM?
WELL, HE REALLY ISN'T DUE BACK UNTIL MIDNIGHT — THE CHIEF JUST WANTS US TO SEE THAT HE MAKES IT!
GOSH — THAT'S WHAT THEY'RE LOOKING AT — HE HAS A PARROT!
CAN YOU BEAT IT? WE'RE LUCKY IT'S NOT AN ELEPHANT! — HE LOVES ANIMALS!
TELL TH' BIG LUG WHAT WE THINK OF HIS COOKIN', COOKIE!
NOTHIN' DOIN'! I'M TOO MUCH OF A LADY TO USE THEM KIND OF WORDS!
TOM! DID YOU HEAR WHAT THAT PARROT SAID? IT TALKED JUST LIKE A HUMAN BEING!
IT WASN'T THE PARROT — IT WAS HIM! HE'S A VENTRILOQUIST! THIS IS TOO GOOD TO STOP—YET!

MR. AND MRS. — A Great Opportunity Lost — By Arthur Folwell and Ellison Hoover

WHAT'S THAT YOU'RE LOOKING OVER?
MY SCRAPBOOK OF RECIPES. OH, DEAR!
WHEREFORE THE GLOOM?
OH, ALL THESE RECIPES CALL FOR THINGS THAT ARE RATIONED AND IN SUCH QUANTITIES! HOPELESS!
I UNDERSTAND! TWO CUPS OF SUGAR! THREE CUPS! BUTTER! MORE BUTTER!
WELL—WELL, WHAT?
WELL, NOW IS THE TIME TO CHUCK THIS TOME AWAY FOR GOOD AND ALL
STOP! WE CAN USE IT AGAIN AFTER THE WAR

DIXIE DUGAN — An American! — By J. P. McEvoy and H. J. Striebel

THEY WON'T LET ME PARTICIPATE AS A PIONEER BECAUSE I'M NOT A CITIZEN OF THE UNITED STATES
I'LL SEE WHAT I CAN DO
BUTCH—YOU'RE THE LEADER OF OUR EARLY AMERICAN MOVEMENT—WON'T YOU LET LITTLE ROBERT PLAY?
BUT IF HE AIN'T AMERICAN HE AIN'T AMERICAN!
AND YOU'RE NOT A REAL PIONEER!—SINCE YOU'RE PRETENDING TO BE ONE, ROBERT HAS A RIGHT TO PRETEND TOO, HASN'T HE?
YEH

RIGHT AROUND HOME — By Dudley Fisher

WHERE HAVE YOU BEEN? YOU'RE LATE!
YOU'D BE SURPRISED, IF I TOLD YOU I STOPPED AT EVERY HARDWARE STORE ON THE WAY HOME, TRYING TO GET YOU A NEW TEA-STRAINER!
I DON'T THINK I COULD STAND THE SHOCK!
WELL, GIVE ME FIVE MINUTES AND I'LL THINK UP SOMETHING BETTER!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Taming of the Shrew — By Frank Martinek

WELL, I HAD A PLAN BUT I'VE CHANGED MY MIND... IN DOING YOUR DIRTY WORK, GENERAL, YOU FINALLY TURNED ME AGAINST MY FATHER... I JOINED YOUR GANG OF SPIES BECAUSE I LOVE ZIGGY WHOM YOU ALSO FORCED TO DO YOUR BIDDING!

. . . TO OUR FLAG

- To millions throughout the world, Old Glory is the Symbol of Liberty . . . the Emblem of Mankind's Fight for Freedom.
- Born during the nation's infancy, its stars have increased in number as the country has grown in size; the domain over which it waves expanding until the sun on its flying folds now never sets.
- Filled with significance are its colors of red, white and blue . . . into which have been woven the strength and courage of American manhood, the love and loyalty of American womanhood.
- It represents the Declaration of Independence. It reflects the wealth and grandeur of this great land of opportunity. It stands for Tolerance . . . Equality . . . Freedom.
- Our supreme duty . . . our sacred trust . . . our individual responsibility . . . is to KEEP IT FLYING.
- We are all Defenders of the Flag . . . WE, the UNarmed Forces of America!
- We've learned that wars cannot be won by wishful thinking.
- We've learned that Courage, by itself, is a thin and fragile weapon against Axis treachery.
- We've learned the tragedy of loss, for want of a few extra bombers . . . in the right place . . . at the right time.
- We've learned that we must work as many hours making guns as our boys now work in using them.
- We've learned that Victory requires an All-Out Job on everybody's part . . . to produce the planes, the tanks, the bullets, the ships, the guns.
- And that means money . . . your money . . . at least a dime from every dollar . . . every payday . . . and as much extra in between as you can spare . . . for War Savings Bonds and Stamps.
- Let's pledge ourselves this Flag Day that we shall keep aloft our Flag . . . the badge of America's greatness and the emblem of its destiny.
- Let's keep Old Glory flying!
- We can, we will, we MUST!
